GUILD GUILTY

Proof That He Sought to Have the Overtime Bill Killed.

The startling declaration that Governor Guild was not only aware that Senators were working to prevent the Overtime Bill from coming before him, BUT THAT HE ASKED ONE SENATOR AT LEAST TO HELP PREVENT IT, was made to-day by Donald C. MacDonald, editor of Practical Politics.

Mr. MacDonald named the Senator who, he said, told him that Governor Guild had talked to him about the matter. He is Allan G. Buttrick of Lancaster. When Senator Buttrick was interviewed by a representative of the BOSTON AMERICAN he would not deny the statement of Mr. MacDonald.

That Governor Guild knew that members of the Senate were working to prevent the Overtime Bill from coming before him, to save him from embarrassment, can not be doubted, according to those who were in close touch with proceedings at the State House at that time.

ADMITS AID WAS ASKED.

Two things at least are certain: the overtime bill was killed by Senators who believed they were carrying out the wishes of the Governor, and, if the Governor did not know the work that was being done in his interest, he was the only man on Beacon Hill who did not.

One Senator, Allan G. Buttrick of Lancaster, admitted to Donald C. MacDonald, editor of Practical Politics, the latter declares, that HE HAD BEEN ASKED BY THE GOVERNOR TO HELP PREVENT THE BILL COMING BEFORE HIM. Mr. MacDonald asserts that both Senators Buttrick and Arthur M. Taft of Worcester were in daily association with the Governor, and that they were at the head of the movement to kill the bill before it reached Mr. Guild.

In his Lawrence speech Governor Guild said:

"I never asked or intimated, directly or indirectly, that I desired any man to vote against that bill (overtime bill). If any senator sought for votes against it on the ground that I wished to be relieved of embarrassment, he did so without the slightest authorization from me."

Senator Buttrick, when seen by a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN and asked if the Governor had requested him to interfere with the Overtime Bill, and if he had told Mr. MacDonald so, made this reply:

BOTH SENATORS EVASIVE.

"Ah-er-I have nothing to say about that."

When Senator Taft was asked about the matter he made a similar evasive reply. Neither Senator Buttrick nor Taft denied that he had been asked by the Governor to prevent the bill from coming to him.

At his office, No. 6 Beacon street, Mr. Macdonald was asked to-day if he could throw any light on the killing of the overtime bill, as he was a personal observer of events at the State House at the time. In response he said:

"In a talk with Governor Guild he informed me that bills were being sent to him to embarrass him. I said: 'Why, you didn't get the overtime bill.' 'Why, that wouldn't embarrass me. I'd have signed it.'

"That meant that he was ready to sign the bill. When Senators heard that he had said he would have signed the bill they were disgusted. Senators Taft and Buttrick were very close to the Governor. Every one supposed that the Governor not only asked them to stop the bill, but knew that they were bending every effort to get other Senators to help the Governor.

Wanted Good Record.

"If the Senate had lasted a few weeks longer there would have been an open revolt because of the Governor's anxiety to make his record one that would appeal to voters, but he had no solicitude as to the records of the Senators who were being called upon to help him."

"Have you any reason to believe that the Governor asked either Senator Taft or Senator Buttrick to keep the overtime bill from coming to him?" Mr. Macdonald was asked.

"I have," replied Mr. MacDonald.

"What reason?"

"Senator Buttrick told me so."

"Did Senator Taft tell you the same thing?"

TRIED TO COPY CRANE.

"No, but his closeness to the Governor and his actions in reference to the bill led me to that belief.

"The first mistake Governor Guild made," continued Mr. MacDonald, "was when he took the chair as Governor and tried to emulate one of the shrewdest Governors we ever had in this State, Murray Crane, the only Governor who was able to 'divert' or 'bend' legislation. There is only one Crane, and Guild tried to imitate him. Results have proven it.

"I want to say that I think Senator Buttrick is a good, whole-souled, well-meaning man and that he has had to shoulder the responsibilities of protecting Guild."

IDENTITY OF WOULD-BE SUICIDE A MYSTERY

WOMAN WHO TRIED TO END LIFE ON COMMON SAYS SHE WILL GO TO FRIENDS.

Preparing to-day to slip away from the Relief Hospital and to take the first train from Boston to Providence, so she says, the young woman who gave her name as Jeannette Milne and who tried to commit suicide by drinking poison last night on the Common, by her answer to questions put to her and her manner, has cloaked herself in mystery.

That she is not Miss Jeannette Milne of No. 524 Hancock street, Long Island City, N. Y., the Boston police believe. Who she is they can not conjecture, for she will tell nothing about herself that will in any way throw light upon her identity.

"I am a victim of ill health," she says. "I grew despondent and I feared poverty for I don't know a soul in Boston. I was out of work and almost out of money. I took my last cent to buy tincture of larkspur and would have drunk it all had I not been interfered with last night.

Only Wants to Get Away.

"I do not wish to talk about myself. No one here knows me and all I want to do is to get away now that I must live. I have had offers of assistance and I have had people call to see me to-day, but I will not see anyone. I do not want to talk with anybody. When I leave Boston I am going to Providence where I have relatives. I will stay there with them."

No persuasion could induce her to say anything further. When Daniel Sullivan and several friends ran to the mysterious woman on the Comon last evening, as she was raising the little bottle to her lips, she struggled with them slightly and then submitted. "I wanted to die because I am poor and in ill health," was all that she would tell them.

She was taken in an ambulance to the Court Square station and then to the Relief Hospital, where restoratives and antidotes were administered. To-day she is almost entirely recovered and may leave the hospital when she desires.

Almost from the first she has absolutely refused to talk. The few short broken sentences, telling why she wanted to die and where she lived, were all that she would say. She seemed to be chagrined that her planned self-destruction had been interferred with, and mortification that she should live to face her unsuccessful efforts sealed her lips.

That she has told her right name is not credited by many. Miss Milne, as she calls herself, is about thirty-four years of age. She wears a dark, well-made suit and is rather good looking.

Aside from her stating that she is going to live with friends in Providence, her lips are closed as to her plans. She does not say why she left her Long Island City home, nor why she will not return there. She will not give her reasons for coming to Boston, and pleads to be allowed to preserve her mystery as to herself.

SAY CASTELLANE BEAT WIFE TO EXTORT MONEY

LAWYER FOR COUNTESS ACCUSES BONI OF NEGLECT AND BRUTALITY.

PARIS, Oct. 31.—That Count Boni de Castellane frequently struck and slapped his wife, formerly Miss Anna Gould, during the scenes between the two when he made his oft-repeated demands for money, was the startling declaration made by Countess Anna's attorney, Maitre Cruppi, in the hearing of the Countess's suit for divorce which began to-day.

Other equally as startling revelations as to the unhappy lot to which the Countess has submitted during the years of her married life are expected, and the whole hearing promises to be sensational in the extreme.

Demands Her Children.

Maitre Cruppi opened the hearing by demanding an absolute divorce and the custody of the children for his client. He plunged into the story of the wrongs of the Countess at the hands of her titled husband. It was Count Boni's constant practice, he asserted, when trying to extort money from his American wife, to strike and slap her.

A letter from Mrs. Millington Drake was offered by M. Cruppi, which showed that Boni's brutalities to his wife began three months after her marriage. Anna only bought peace by yielding her entire income to her husband.

ALLOWED HER $60 A MONTH.

The attorney produced another letter from Countess Anna in which it was shown that recently, Boni, who held the purse strings, had allowed her only between $60 and $80 a month for her personal expenses. She begged him to raise this allowance to $200, but he refused her gruffly.

This niggardliness of Boni's in dealing with his wife, as well as his brutalities, personal extravagance and infidelity, combined to make Countess Anna insist upon a divorce. Several instances of unfaithfulness on the part of Count Boni were detailed by M. Cruppi.

It is the intention of Countess Anna to remain in France after she secures her divorce and to rear her children here. This statement was made to the court by M. Cruppi in her behalf, setting at rest the reports that once free from her husband she will return to her native country.

STURGIS LAW COSTS MAINE $27,331.80

PORTLAND, Me., Oct. 31.—The enforcement of the Sturgis law in Maine has cost up to the first of October of this year the sum of $31,309.04. The sum received in fines and fees was $3,977.24, leaving a balance of $27,331.80, while the appropriation for the enforcement commission is only $7,500 per annum.

State Auditor Turner's Statement Says

FAIRBANK TOOK VOUCHER

Called at Office and Obtained Document Referred to by District Attorney Moran.

The astounding disclosure was made today by State Auditor Henry E. Turner that Wilson H. aFirbank, charged by James M. Perkins in an affidavit with having instigated the signing of a false signature to a voucher for $77.80, in connection with the expenditure of State funds at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, had secured on Oct. 4, possession of a voucher for this amount from the files of the State Auditor's office and had given in place of it his personal check for $77.80.

The details of this irregular transaction have come to light through the investigation started by District Attorney John B. Moran, following the affidavit by Perkins, which Mr. Moran read at the Independence League rally in Tremont Temple last Saturday night.

TO GO TO GRAND JURY.

Assistant District Attorney Michael J. Dwyer, acting under Mr. Moran's direction, is now collecting data to be placed before the Grand Jury at the November session, which begins next Monday.

The substitution of the personal check of Mr. Fairbank for the alleged false voucher occurred one week before Mr. Perkins brought the matter to the attention of Governor Guild and after Mr. Perkins as secretary of the board of managers had repeatedly requested Mr. Fairbank to permit him to examine the books and vouchers relating to the expenditure of the $15,000 appropriated by the Legislature for the Oregon exposition.

Governor Guild has been charged by Mr. Moran with holding back the evidence in the case from the District Attorney's office for fear it would injure the Republican candidate's election prospects.

Mr. Fairbank, it was charged by Mr. Perkins, had required his stenographer, Miss Rich, to sign the name of an Oregon transportation company to a false voucher for the amount of $77.

RETURNED THE MONEY.

Mr. Fairbank repeatedly refused to give up this and other vouchers to Mr. Perkins and, apparently unknown to him, called at the office of Auditor Turner, went over the vouchers, secured possession of the voucher alleged by Mr. Perkins to be false, and returned the amount of money which it represented to have been expended.

Here is State Auditor Turner' sexplanation of the transaction:

Commonwealth of Massachusetts,
Auditor's Office.
Boston, Mass., Oct. 31, 1906.

"In February, 1906, the Hon. Wilson H. Fairbank, executive member of the commission having in charge the Massachusetts exhibit at the Lewis & Clark Exposition at Portland, Oregon, submitted to me a mass of vouchers covering the expenses of that commission from December, 1904, to date to presentation; said expenses having eben paid from money advanced from the treasury by authority of the Governor and Council, in whose charge the appropriation made by the General Court had been placed. These vouchers showed the disposition which had been made of the money so advanced. They were carefully examined and passed by this office.

"On October 4, 1906, Mr. Fairbank came to me and expressed a wish to go thoroughly over the various receipted bills and vouchers which he had submitted in Feburary, saying that he thought there were one or two inaccuracies in said vouchers, which he asked permission to correct, should he find upon examination that such errors existed. I afforded to him the same courtesy which I should have afforded to any citizen or official of the Commonwealth under the same circumstances. I gave him access to the vouchers, and, being called away from the office, instructed my deputy, Mr. William D. Hawley, to allow Mr. Fairbank to correct any errors which he might find to exist.

Found One Error.

"Mr. aFirbank found one error, amounting to $77.80, caused by practically a duplication of a transaction. He gave his check to Mr. Hawley for that amount, payable to the order of the State Treasurer, and the bill was delivered to him. The following is an exact copy of Mr. Hawley's letter to the Treasurer, transmitting the check, which he did on the following morning:

"Boston, Oct. 5, 1906.

"Hon. Arthur B. Chapin, Treasurer and Receiver General:

"Dear Sir—Enclosed please find check of Wilson H. Fairbank for $77.80. Mr. Fairbank received payment from the Treasury for bill in connection with the Oregon Transportation Company. Now he comes to this office and states that he is satisfied that there is an error in the bill. We have returned the voucher to him and the enclosed check is to go to the credit of the Lewis and Clark Exposition appropriation.

Yours very truly,
"WILLIAM D. HAWLEY, Deputy Auditor.

"There are no vouchers missing from the Auditor's Department.

"HENRY E. TURNER, Auditor."

TROLLEY TRUST LIVES IN "HOLDING COMPANY"

The astounding fact was made public to-day, through a letter written by Charles S. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, that the electric railways formerly held by the company, which they were obliged to disgorge by law, are now to pass into the hands of a so-called "holding company" whose entire list of officers are directors of the railroad.

In other words, the plan of giving up the electric lines, which the people demanded by law so that the railway competition in this State would not be killed, is a subterfuge which Attorney-General Malone permitted by failing to bring action during the ninety-six days that the company violated the statute.

Long Defiance of the Law.

The BOSTON AMERICAN, day after day during the greater part of that period, called the attention of the Attorney-General to the fact that the railroad company was failing to obey the law. Now the company comes forward through President Mellen and unfolds its scheme of obeying the law, which any one but a blind man can readily see is nothing more than an attempt to circumvent the law.

Attorney-General Malone in a statement to-day said that he should not take any action concerning the new company, which is styled the "New England Investment and Security Company."

"I know all about this company, and had it in mind when I filed my pleadings in September," said the Attorney-General, "and I told reporters who came to see me Tuesday that there was absolutely nothing new in the situation.

"It is absurd to say that I shall apply for an injunction stopping the sale of stock of this new concern. If my pleadings in the case brought in September are sustained, then that of itself will stop the sale."

Under Mellen's Control.

The New England Investment and Security Company by this "leak" is discovered to be the "voluntary association" formed by President Mellen of the New Haven system after the road, according to the president, had "got rid" of all its electric lines.

The statement of President Mellen to the shareholders of the companies taken over already by the "voluntary association" shows that the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad did "get rid of its holdings" and that immediately afterward a new concern was incorporated having the same officers and the identical directors.

The only reason for the incorporation, according to the admission of a man on the inside today, was to get a company under the control of Mellen and his associates which should handle the stock, and if need be operate the railways barred from their control by the statutes. Whether the quibble will be allowed to achieve its purpose will be determined by the judiciary.

SCHOONER ASHORE OFF CAPE COD; 6 IN PERIL

HYANNIS, Oct. 31.—Rolling, pitching, straining in the waves, which are continually breaking over her and threatening to break to pieces at any moment, the schooner Arthur Lord is ashore on Southwest Grounds, near here. The captain, mate and four seamen are aboard and are in peril of their lives.

porter, Captain Corney of the sloop Hattie B., put out as close as he could to-day to where the schooner was rolling on the rocks of the cape. The sea was too high for him to come along side and take off the men.

The captain of the schooner megaphoned: "Telegraph to Vineyard Haven for a tug to help us. We are full of water. If you can't get a tug come out to-night and try to save us. We may not hold together that long."

The Arthur Lord went ashore some time during last night. When day broke she was discovered with her flag hanging in her rigging, union down, signalling for help. The sea ran mountains high, and it was not for some hours that Captain Carney dared to venture out to her. When he did, it required a great display of seamanship and bravery.

The vessel is full of water, having been broken by the rocks on which she is lying.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE "MOTHER" CLOSES DOORS OF HER HOME TO PUBLIC.

MRS. EDDY HAS SAID FINAL WORD TO THE WORLD

Aged Leader, Her Secretary Declares, Will Never Admit Interviewers to Her Presence Again.

Special to the Boston American.

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 31.—Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy in her audience to the newspaper representatives yesterday has given her last interview, according to Louis C. Strang, one of her secretaries.

To two representatives of the BOSTON AMERICAN who called at Pleasant View after Mrs. Eddy had returned from her drive Mr. Strang said:

"At 1 o'clock to-day Pleasant View was closed to the world: Mrs. Eddy will never be seen again."

When asked to explain this statement later Mr. Strang said that form of utterance was "melodramatic."

"Mrs. Eddy will take her daily drive as usual," he continued. "She will receive her friends at Pleasant View as heretofore, but it is probable that, in view of recent unpleasant occurrences, her rule against newspaper interviews will now be more strictly enforced."

Before.

REPORTS published broadly to the effect that Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy was dying of cancer; was absolutely ruled by others about her, being unable to manage her affairs; and that she was impersonated in her drives about Concord, N. H., by another woman, a member of her household.

The Interview.

ARRANGED by Secretary Frye in all its details.

Only reporters selected by Mrs. Eddy's admirers admitted.

Spokesman for reporters chosen by Frye.

But four questions, agreed upon in advance, permitted.

Only three questions of the four answered by Mrs. Eddy.

Interview lasted only fifty-five seconds.

After.

I REGARD the interview of yesterday as a mistake. The reporters did not see Mrs. Eddy long enough to form an accurate idea of her condition. If they could have visited with her an hour they would have found her a remarkably well preserved and intelligent woman for one of her years.—Alfred Farlow, head of Christian Science Publicity Bureau.

FRAIL AND PALSIED, MRS. EDDY DENIES THAT SHE IS DYING

By Eleanor Ames.

The portals of Pleasant View, the home of the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder and discoverer of Christian Science, opened for a few moments yesterday to a chosen few, and Mrs. Eddy appeared before them to refute the charge which has stirred the whole world, that she is dying of a mortal disease, and that her mind is failing with her body.

Eighteen persons were granted this privilege.

These included representatives of the press, the $16,000,000 organization whose founder and leader has been attacked, the Eddy household, the government of the State of New Hampshire, and an official stenographer furnished by Christian Science interests to prevent the misquoting of Mrs. Eddy's words.

Mrs. Pamelia J. Leonard was present, to prove that she was not impersonating Mrs. Eddy.

Mr. Edward Pearson, secretary of the State of New Hampshire, who has known Mrs. Eddy personally for fifteen years, was there to identify her.

And shortly before 1 o'clock the curtains were drawn aside, and Mrs. Eddy, weak, wan, feeble, shaking with palsy, stood before us, a pitiable picture of decaying womanhood, a mere shadow of the strong, imperious woman who in the past thirty years has gained a hold and wielded a power in the world such as has no other woman in history.

In response to questions, shouted to overcome her deafness, Mrs. Eddy asserted that her bodily health was perfect; that God was her only physician; that she drove every day.

And then, with feeble, uncertain steps, supported by the arms of her secretary, Mr. Frye, and her assistant secretary, Mr. Strang, she tottered to her carriage, the robes were tucked about her shrunken body, she waved a white gloved hand limply to the assembled household, and was driven away in the rain and cold which characterized the weather conditions.

The chosen few were, "by Mrs. Eddy's invitation," they were told, taken on a tour of inspection of the house, which included the parlors, the library and the dining room downstairs, and Mrs. Eddy's own study upstairs.

And then the portals of Pleasant View closed, never again to open to public touch.

"The gates are closed forever to the public. Mrs. Eddy will never again be interviewed."

Such was the decisive statement given out by Lewis Strang last night.

It would be easier to obtain an audience with the Pope of Rome than it was to gain converse with the Rev. Mrs. Eddy.

Pointed Questions Put to Her.

Permission for a sight of her, for the sound of her voice, was granted only after the impression had been given universal credence that she was totally unable to be seen and heard, and that another woman was being paraded in her guise before the public.

Until a few moments before the appointed time for the interview, no definite promise had been given that Mrs. Eddy could be seen.

When the final permission was granted another obstacle arose in the question of who should be among the chosen, and the personnel of the delegation was reached only after long and heated arguments.

An effort was made to limit the number to eight and to exclude all those who had made any unkind allusions to Mrs. Eddy or to Christian Science. The delegation named, the rule was made that one should be chosen as spokesman and the briefest questions asked to cover the points under discussion.

Namely: Is Mrs. Eddy suffering from an organic disease? Does she employ the services of a physician? Does she and not another drive out every day? Does anyone but herself manage her affairs or administer her property?

It was exactly 12:45 when the chosen representatives gathered in the drawing room of Pleasant View. It is a charming room at the right of the hall as you enter. The general color scheme is a bright rose pink, the upholstering and draperies combining this shade. In the adjoining room, through the wide doors, is an oil painting of Mrs. Eddy, showing her as a young woman with jet black hair and shrewd, sharp eyes.

Shortly after we arrived, Mrs. Pamelia J. Leonard and Mrs. Laura Sargent entered the room and greeted each one of us with a cordial handclasp and welcoming word. Greatest interest centred in Mrs. Leonard, for it is she who has been accused of impersonating Mrs. Eddy on many drives.

Both women are about the same height and both have snow white hair. Mrs. Leonard, however, is at least twenty years younger than Mrs. Eddy, and has black eyes, while Mrs. Eddy's eyes are light.

Presently Mr. Calvin Frye entered. He wore the livery which he dons when he changes from secretary to footman and takes his seat on the box of Mrs. Eddy's carriage beside the coachman.

Yesterday the livery was green. Some days it is wine colored. Mr. Frye is a short, stocky man, with gray hair and mustache.

As soon as he had greeted us, he pulled the portiere across the door leading into the hall, shutting out any view of the stairs down which Mrs. Eddy must pass.

Outside the door her carriage, drawn by handsome black horses, waited.

Then suddenly the curtain was drawn aside, and the most remarkable woman in the world, the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, stood before us.

The Christian Science faith calls illness sin and ignores death.

Yet there stood its discoverer, founder and leader, a physical wreck, tottering, pallid, like a vision from beyond the grave.

There she was, a slender, frail little woman, her wrinkled, chalky-white face illumined with a smile, her head shaking, her hands trembling, but with her eyes abnormally big and bright.

A handsome black satin brocade cloak with ermine lining and trimming, showed the glimpse of a rose-colored gown. Long white gloves were drawn to her elbows.

On her gray hair rested a wonderful white velvet bonnet, glittering with silver sequins, adorned with white plumes and fastened under the shriveled chin with white strings. She was unlike the presence of the living. She was more a vision of an embodied spirit. She seemed so ethereal, so spirituelle as to be unreal.

The spokeswoman advanced.

"Mrs. Eddy, are you in perfect bodily health?" she asked.

The swaying figure in the doorway leaned toward her.

"What?" asked a feeble, shrill voice.

The question was almost shouted.

The fragile body straightened itself theatrically, the white plumes in the hat quivered earnestly.

"Indeed, I am," came in deep, thrilling tones.

"Have you any other physician than God?"

This question also had to be loudly repeated. But it transformed Mrs. Eddy.

It gave a momentary glimpse of her former strength, of the imperiousness of the woman in her prime. It flashed the suggestion of the tremendous force which has placed her where she stands to-day.

Health Perfect, She Declares.

"No physician but God," thrilled the voice. She threw her arms out, her hands upward and her eyes were raised toward heaven as she responded, "His everlasting arms are around about me."

It was a sudden access of power, and relapse was instantaneous.

Mrs. Eddy seemed to shrink and grow feebler. She drew away from the door.

"That is enough," she said.

"Do you drive daily?" was asked.

"Yes," she replied, nodding her head in affirmation, as she sank back into the arms of Mr. Strang and Mr. Frye, and by them was helped to her carriage.

Gone was the smile of a moment before, gone the strength.

A poor, shriveled-up old woman sat there, shaking with palsy, as Mr. Strang tucked the robes about her and Mr. Frye talked earnestly with her.

Then one white-gloved hand waved adieu and the carriage rolled down the driveway.

The interview was over. We had seen that Mrs. Eddy was living, that she was able to take a drive.

But the impression left was much like opening the sepulchre and taking from it the shell of what had once been a mortal woman and placing therein an automaton, which moved and spoke without genuine understanding. It was pathos made theatrical.

Even for a woman of her years Mrs. Eddy seems unusually feeble.

Her face is absolutely bloodless, and the glassy brilliancy of her eyes gives to it a remarkable expression. How did she come down the stairs?

Was She Carried Down the Stairs?

Did she walk down, as the members of her household declared is her regular custom, or did the strong arms of Mr. Strang carry her to the door and place her there, standing, smiling before us, when the curtain should be drawn aside?

Certainly we heard no slow, unsteady footsteps descending the stairs, we heard no silken frou-frou of skirts.

The curtain drawn aside revealed Mrs. Eddy standing in the doorway, and we saw her feeble passage across the piazza to her carriage, supported on each side by the strong arms of strong men. And the figure we had seen was no dummy.

It was undoubtedly and beyond cavil the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy. We believed without question the words of the Hon. Edward Pearson when he solemnly said:

"That is Mrs. Eddy."

But to those of us who are Christian Scientists and are used to old ladies as old ladies, with the acknowledged infirmities of their years, it seems almost cruel to dress this poor old woman in the extreme of fashion and regardless of weather to send her forth daily, that the public may see that she who founded a doctrine which teaches that sickness is sin and death a mistake, still lives and moves and has her being.

The cheerful, high pitched voice of Mrs. Leonard called us from the window.

"Well, you know that it is Mrs. Eddy and not I who went driving, don't you?" she asked, laughing.

"Do you think I look like Mrs. Eddy?" she continued. "Do you think I could be mistaken for her?"

It may never have been done, but as a matter of fact, to those who know the possibilities of stage transformations, the impersonation of Mrs. Eddy by Mrs. Leonard would not be a difficult task, provided the right clothing, and the closed, and moving carriage was taken into consideration.

House a Jungle of Rich Furnishings.

As soon as Mrs. Eddy's carriage disappeared, Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Laura Sargent took us on a tour of inspection of the house, thereby fulfilling what they declared was "an invitation from Mrs. Eddy."

Study of the rooms brings out the strange incongruity of furnishings and ornamentations.

The house is conglomerate rather than distinctive. It represents a curiously interesting patchwork of gifts from many lands and representative of the choice of many minds.

Probably no woman in the world has been more liberally showered with tokens from every corner of the universe than has Mrs. Eddy.

In the drawing room, where we were received, in the centre of the room a gilt and glass case holds a $1,000 volume of "Bohemia."

This case stands on an exquisite rug sent from Buenos Ayres.

On each side of the wide doors leading to the back parlor, which contains among other things an old-fashioned square piano, are two rare paintings.

The one on the right is a famous Madonna and is valued at $5,000.

On the other side is a head of Christ showing hair and beard of golden yellow.

On a table covered by a beautifully wrought cover sent from China by Mrs. Edwin H. Conger, an ardent Scientist, rest two silver trowels, one used at the laying of the corner stone of the Concord Church, the other the Boston edifice.

In the hall are two family portraits, one of Asa Eddy, the other of Mrs. Eddy's son, George Glover.

"Resurrection" Her Favorite.

A wonderful painting of the Angel of the Revelations, with book in hand, and one foot on land and one on sea, inspires one as she climbs the stairs. The elusiveness and spirit effect of the art is remarkable.

The subject also gives the note for the decorations of Mrs. Eddy's study, for the walls are covered with uplifting, inspiring pictures.

"This is of all the pictures in the house, Mrs. Eddy's favorite," said Mrs. Leonard pausing before a small representation of the "Resurrection."

On the card of the giver, stuck in the frame, was this inscription, which I firmly believe voices the heart-sentiment of every true follower of Mrs. Eddy:

"Thank God for love's angel, living life's principles, with her eternal Easter message of infinite, divine possibilities."

It is in this study that one gains the most intimate impression of Mrs. Eddy. Her spirit, calm and broad, seems to pervade the apartment, and believer or scoffer though you may be, you cannot escape its recognition. Here this remarkable woman has spent the greater part of her life for many years.

Here she has received the ones closest to the heart of the faith she founded.

Here disciples have sat at her feet and drank deep in the principles of that faith.

Here have been written the various messages which have been sent broadcast all over the globe, carrying to the faithful words of help and comfort from the fountain head.

It is a comfortable, home-like, peaceful room. There is a desk, chairs, bookcase, table where stands a dainty china bowl and pitcher, that "Mrs. Eddy may wash her hands when they get soiled with pencil lead when she is writing," explained Mrs. Sargent.

Clara McKee, Mrs. Eddy's constant companion and maid, was gently putting the room in order while its occupant was out.

Mrs. Sargent called attention to a marble figure in the window, of a boy poring over a book.

It is called the "White Student," and was presented by the Sunday School in Kansas City.

Works Every Day; Never Idle.

"More than anything else it represents Mrs. Eddy," she declared. "You might call it the motto of the room. No one has any idea of the amount of work Mrs. Eddy does."

"Even now?"

"Certainly. Why not?

"Is Mrs. Eddy able to write much?"

"Why, certainly. She writes all the time. What? Why, letters, messages, various things."

"Is she writing any new book?" Mrs. Sargent looked at Mrs. Leonard and smiled.

"You will have to ask her," they both replied. "This much we can say. Mrs. Eddy does an amount of work every day that would be considered tremendous by many younger women. She is never idle. She rises at 6 o'clock, has breakfast at 6:30 and goes right to work.

"At 12 o'clock, noon, she eats dinner. At 1 she goes for a drive. At 6 she has supper. At 9 she retires. She is a delicate eater, but that is nothing new. She was never hearty."

"Does she read her letters herself?" I asked. "Many of them," replied Mrs. Leonard. "Have you any idea what her correspondence is? It would be impossible for any one person to attend to it. A good deal has been said regarding Mr. Frye's duties as secretary. How many busy women are without secretaries? Every letter of great importance is submitted to Mrs. Eddy."

HAS FOOD SENT TO HER ROOM.

Near at hand, as Mrs. Eddy sits in her big Morris chair, is an electric bell. It is by means of this that she summons the various members of her household, each member having a number.

"Do you have access to this room at all times?" was asked.

"Practically so. As much as any one person can be said to have free access to another person's room," was the reply. "Mrs. Eddy likes to be alone, free from distracting thoughts and sounds, and we respect her wishes. She has to be secluded and quiet. Think of all that devolves upon her!

"Every day we come here and receive a talk from Mrs. Eddy, which is of the greatest help to us. Her talks to us are priceless. It is a great favor and privilege to live here."

That is the spirit which dominates all the followers, one of adoration, of reverence.

Photographs of Mrs. Eddy's dearest friends and relatives adorn the mantel in her room. There is a picture of Hoke Smith and Hoke Smith's father, who is her cousin, and also one of General Baker, another cousin. A picture of her grandson is displayed on a "whatnot" down stairs.

In the dining room, which is a modest room, with the table kept constantly laid for six, Mrs. Eddy's place at the head of the table was pointed out with reverence.

"I sit here," said Mrs. Leonard, designating the chair at the right of the revered leader. "From this," she touched a silver tea pot, "Mrs. Eddy has often poured my cocoa."

Asked if Mrs. Eddy came down stairs to her meals, Mrs. Leonard replied that she "ate breakfast upstairs."

From another authentic source I learned that she eats all her meals in her study and that it is some time since she has occupied her place at the table.

It is declared by outsiders and not denied by those nearest to her that Mrs. Eddy has failed very rapidly within the past six months.

Even Mr. Pearson, who identified her yesterday, was shocked at the change in her appearance.

It seems to be the final disintegration incident to old age, and from which even her marvelous faith cannot save her.

In the event of her death what would become of the $16,000,000 organization she has built up?

That is the question which interests the whole world. Could another take the helm and steer the craft in safe channels? Or would the death of the one at the wheel mean discord and disruption?

"Who will be Mrs. Eddy's successor?" I asked Mr. Wilson.

"CAN HAVE NO SUCCESSOR."

"Mrs. Eddy can have no successor," he replied in the voice of one who reproves a profane utterance. "The founder and discoverer of Christian science stands alone. Her's is a place which can never be filled by anyone else."

"How would the church be governed after her death?"

"The same as it is now. Mrs. Eddy does not govern the church. We look to her as our leader, and we go to her for help and counsel, but she does not govern or rule."

"In the event of her death, would Pleasant View become a Christian Science property?"

"Certainly not. Why should it? It is Mrs. Eddy's own home, her property to do with as she likes."

"Is it not expected that it will become a shrine, a part of the church?"

Mr. Wilson was visibly annoyed.

"The Christian Science religion does not have shrines," he declared. "Each Scientist finds his shrine in his own heart. Wherever God is that is a shrine. Scientists study God. That is the object of their religion."

According to Mr. Wilson, Christian Science contributes nothing to the Eddy exchequer, nor has she ever received one penny from the Christian Science Publishing Company.

Her entire income, says he, is derived from the sale of her book, "Science and Health," and from her investments.

The organization of the household at Pleasant View is almost as wonderful in its way as the organization of the church itself. It is considered no hardship to give up home and devote one's energies to the immediate care of Mrs. Eddy and her interests. Instead it is looked upon as a blessing and an honor.

"What is your position here?" I asked Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Sargent.

"We are all sisters and I am the eldest," replied Mrs. Leonard oracularly.

It is something which the lay mind cannot grasp. Independence is dear. Yet Calvin Frye, closer to Mrs. Eddy than anyone else, is willing for some reason to don a livery and take his place as footman on the box of the leader's carriage.

Before long, Mrs. Eddy must in the course of things pass away.

What then? What of the religion she has founded?

What of Pleasant View?

What of her disciples?

Is there a rock foundation upon which Christian Science will stand forever?

Or will the removal of the discoverer cause the sands to shift and that $16,000,000 organization which circles the civilized globe to totter and fall?

It is a problem of boundless interest, and not to be dismissed lightly.

Mary Baker G. Eddy's days are numbered.

Catarrh of the Stomach

A Pleasant, Simple, But Safe and Effectual Cure for It.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY.

Catarrh of the stomach has long been considered the next thing to incurable. The usual symptoms are a full or bloating sensation after eating, accompanied sometimes with sour or watery risings, a formation of gases, causing pressure on the heart and lungs and difficult breathing, headaches, fickle appetite, nervousness and a general played out, languid feeling.

There is often a foul taste in the mouth, coated tongue and if the interior of the stomach could be seen it would show a slimy, inflamed condition.

The cure for this common and obstinate trouble is found in a treatment which causes the food to be readily, thoroughly digested before it has time to ferment and irritate the delicate mucous surfaces of the stomach. To secure a prompt and healthy digestion is the one necessary thing to do and when normal digestion is secured the catarrhal condition will have disappeared.

According to Dr. Harlanson, the safest and best treatment is to use after each meal a tablet, composed of Diastase, Aseptic Pepsin, a little Nux, Golden Seal and fruit acids. These tablets can now be found at all drug stores under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and not being a patent medicine can be used with perfect safety and assurance that healthy appetite and thorough digestion will follow their regular use after meals.

Mr. R. S. Workman, Chicago, Ills., writes: "Catarrh is a local condition resulting from a neglected cold in the head, whereby the lining membrane of the nose becomes inflamed and the poisonous discharge therefrom passing backward into the throat reaches the stomach, thus producing catarrh of the stomach. Medical authorities prescribed for me for three years for catarrh of stomach without cure, but today I am the happiest of men after using only one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. I cannot find appropriate words to express my good feeling. I have found flesh, appetite and sound rest from their use."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is the safest preparation as well as the simplest and most convenient remedy for any form of Indigestion, Catarrh of stomach, biliousness, sour stomach, heartburn and bloating after meals.

$3,000 FINE FOR CONTEMPT IN CATTLE CASE

Consolidated Rendering Company Punished for Destroying Papers.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Oct. 31.—The Consolidated Rendering Company, a Maine corporation, was found guilty of contempt to-day and fined $3,00 by Judge Rowell in the Chittenden County court.

The contempt proceedings followed the failure of the company to produce before the Grand Jury certain papers and memoranda called for by the Grand Jury, which was investigating the alleged importation and sale of diseased cattle in the State of Vermont.

At a hearing before Judge Rowell yesterday counsel for the defendant asked that the proceedings be dismissed on the ground that the papers desired by the Grand Jury had been destroyed prior to the investigation, and evidence was introduced to corroborate the contention.

In announcing his decision to-day Judge Rowell stated that without the papers the investigation of the Grand Jury could not proceed. He found the company guilty of contempt and imposed a fine of $3,000.

The next step to be taken in the investigation has not yet been decided upon, although the Grand Jury is still in session.

BURNED IN JAIL, TRIED TO ESCAPE

VANCOUVER, B. C., Oct. 31.—K. C. Cousins, an Oxford graduate, and Dan Mackenzie, jailed for drunkenness, were incinerated by the burning of the Chilliwack courthouse jail last night. Mackenzie, it is said, started the fire in an attempt to escape and paid for his folly with his life.

FIGHT OVER CHASE MILLION TO GO TO JURY

Agreement to This Effect Made To-day by Lawyers for Dr. Chase and Phillips Heirs.

By an agreement reached to-day between attorneys representing Dr. Horace Chase of Swampscott and the attorneys of Warren, Leonard, Charles and David Phillips and Mrs. Moxey Gage the fight for the $100,000 fortune left by Mrs. Jennie P. Chase will be taken before a jury at Salem.

The last will of Mrs. Chase and the validity of the adoption of DeForest Chase were denied in Probate Court, and Dr. Chase appealed to the Supreme Court. The case came up to-day before Judge Sheldon.

Mrs. Chase died in September, 1905, from gas poisoning, leaving the greater part of her estate to her adopted son, DeForest W. Chase, who died after his mother's death. The property would have reverted to Dr. Chase, but for the objection filed by the Phillips heirs.

The decision of Judge Rollin E. Harmon at the Essex Probate Court disallowed the will and also disallowed the petition of Dr. and Mrs. Chase for the adoption of DeForest W. Chase.

At the time of the death of Mrs. Chase a searching investigation into the cause was made. The following May Judge Berry, who presided over the inquest, decided that death was due to illuminating gas and the taking of certain drugs to induce sleep.

Dr. Chase married Jennie Phillips in 1898. She adopted his son by a former wife and willed her property to him. It developed later that this will was drawn up by an astrologer.

WEDS MAN ON HIS DEATHBED; WIFE AND WIDOW IN ONE DAY

Death Under Knife Ends Romance of Gerda Anderson and Oscar Lundth.

Marriage in Hospital Ward With Doctors and Nurses as Witnesses.

Married and widowed within twenty-four hours is the fate of Mrs. Oscar W. Lundth, who on Monday was Miss Gerda Anderson. To-morrow she sees the body of her husband lowered into its last resting place.

The romance of the girl is ended. Three years ago, when she had just passed her twentieth year, Oscar Lundth, of her own country, big and strong and manly came into her life. He was a lad who would work hard with his hands, and his head was level and his heart kind.

He wooed the maid and won her consent. He set about with her aid in making the home that was to be their joy. They were getting ready for the solemn event that should make them one for life when the Undaunted One appeared and laid his heavy hand on the shoulder of the young man.

They carried Oscar Lundth away to the big hospital on Harrison avenue. Surgeons looked him over and said appendicitis. He was told that an operation was necessary and that his life was in danger.

By his cot watched his fiancee, watchful, eager for the slightest sign that would tell of improvement, of gaining strength. She heard the word of the doctors and a great pain grew in her heart.

"Will you marry me before—before this happens, Gerda?" whispered young Lundth.

"Yes," answered the maid, with her face buried in the white coverlet that he might not see the tears.

Then came the good Rev. Sundeluf, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church on Shawmut avenue. Gentle nurses raised the sick man in his bed. Doctors in white frocks stood round about and from other beds patients raised themselves that they might see and hear.

Slowly the man of God read the words of the wedding service. From the bed his thin hand clasping that of the girl, Oscar Lundth made his response, striving to keep the tones firm and strong.

"Until death do us part."

The eyes of the man sought those of his bride. She pressed her lips to his. The effort had been too much for his strength. He sank back to the pillows while the minister prayed.

That night they took Oscar Lundth to the operating room. He failed to rally. In the morning his bride was a widow.

Such is the ending of Gerda Anderson's romance.

TRAIN SAVED BY TRACK WALKER

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—By running toward an on-rushing train and waving his red lantern a track walker to-day saved many lives by preventing what otherwise inevitably would have been a smash-up in the Lackawanna tunnel under Bergen, near Jersey City.

A huge stone loosened from the roof of the tunnel by a blast in the new tunnel which is being constructed alongside of and within two feet of the old one, fell upon the east-bound track in the path of a train bound for Hoboken.

The track walker heard the crash and realizing that a train filled with commuters for New York was due he rushed toward it frantically waving his lantern.

He was seen in time and the train was brought to a stop within a few feet of the boulder.

ROBBERS TRY TO BURN STORE

Burglars entered the grocery store of Francis H. Goodhue, No. 85 Rockaway street, Lynn, smashed a small safe and took from it about $40 in money, set fire to rubbish in the cellar and then made their escape at an early hour to-day. The fire did damage to the amount of about $500.

The firemen broke down the front door of the store and stumbled over the wrecked safe before a back window of the store through which the burglars had undoubtedly entered. The burglars had evidently broken the safe open by the means of heavy scale weights. Tracks were found around the rear window, but no other clues.

CHANGES IN CAST OF "MADAM BUTTERFLY"

A new prima donna sang the leading role in "Madam Butterfly" at the Tremont Theatre last evening, and there were changes in two of the other principals. Miss Rena Vivienne, an American by birth and a pupil of Victor Maurel, made a very favorable impression. Franc's Maclennan sang the role of Pinkerton and Winfred Goff the part of Sharpless. Another change will be made in the cast to-night.

Faith.

Faith, when once established, cannot be easily shaken, and the faith exhibited by the multitudes of the earth in the curative qualities of Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound is based upon the conviction that it will free the body from all disease. Last year 12,500,000 afflicted who took this famous remedy expressed an absolute faith in its healing powers, and they have freely given their testimonial to verify their statements. It cures ailments of the nerves, stomach, liver, blood and kidneys, such as rheumatism, catarrh, neuralgia, constipation, sick headache, female troubles, erysipelas, etc. It reorganizes the entire system, and by implanting in the body a vital health it removes disease with its evil effects. IDENTITY OF HEROIC BOSTON NURSES KNOWN

Young Women Who Aided the Victims of French Railway Wreck Finally Revealed.

MODESTLY REFUSE NAMES

The identity of the three Boston nurses who in the terrible railway wreck near Epernon, fifty miles from Paris on October 14, themselves narrowly escaping death or injury in the crash, found the wounded and dying with only one physician to assist them and then boarded a special train hurriedly sent from Paris and cared for the sufferers until ambulances took them to Paris hospitals, has now been made known.

The three Boston women who received without revealing their identity the gratitude of the entire French nation are Miss Laura E. Coleman, up to a year ago superintendent of the Faulkner Hospital, Jamaica Plain; Miss Frances Munroe, who has been living in Paris about three years, and Miss Elizabeth Hogle of No. 42 Mt. Vernon street.

Miss Coleman went abroad about nine months ago, and Miss Hogle left for England with a patient in the Spring. Miss Hogle, upon closing her professional engagement in London, planned to spend a few weeks in France with Miss Monroe and Miss Coleman. The three young women had been on a trip through Touraine and were returning to Paris on the afternoon of October 14.

Their train was late and was sidetracked at Epernon to allow an express to pass. Just as the train was leaving the main line an engine and a car crashed into the rear end at a speed of fifty miles an hour.

For fifteen minutes no doctors appeared, and during that time the three Americans were in complete charge of the relief work.

The young women turned two rooms in the railway station and a cafe nearby into hospitals, and from 5 until 10:30 p. m. they worked incessantly to relieve the suffering, not pausing for any nourishment, though they were suffering from the shock of the collision.

WIND AND SEA TIE UP SHIPPING

A gale of thirty-eight miles an hour is blowing in Boston Harbor to-day, and as a consequence a high sea is running. So heavy is the wind and so high are the waves that the fleet of fishing schooners and small steamers is still tied up and will not venture outside to-day.

A large fleet of schooners and barges laden with coal for Boston is tied up in Vineyard Sound to-day. No attempt will be made to move these craft until the wind falls and the sea goes down. The light rain which is falling causes a mist which approaches a fog in its obstruction to navigators and this, too, renders navigation difficult.

SHILOH FACING GIRL HUNT GETS BIG WINDFALL

Faithful Give $5,000 As Mrs. Phelps Seeks Lost Daughter.

FARE OF HOLY GHOSTERS

PORTLAND, Oct. 31.—Facing an investigation of the cruelties alleged to have been imposed upon its members, brought about by prayers of Mrs. Alice Phelps of Kansas City, Mo., who is seeking to get her daughter from the clutches of the Holy Ghosters, the leaders of the colony at Shiloh are to-day overjoyed by the receipt of $5,000 to help them through the winter. Elder George Jewell, the lieutenant of the Rev. Frank W. Sanford, announces it.

In the meantime the clergy of this section of the State are taking steps to have the place probed, and if possible end its existence here. Petitions are circulating to-day asking Governor Cobb to take immediate action if possible, and if not, to put the matter before the Legislature.

Cattle Are Used Well.

George A. Allen of Auburn, the S. P. C. A. agent, and I. H. Purinton, of the Humane Society, visited Shiloh yesterday. Mr. Purinton found that the horses and cattle about the place have the best of treatment. Mr. Allen, who was the guest of Elder Jewell, found out how guests are entertained. He sat down to a meal of baked salmon, warm biscuits, apples, grapes and cocoa. He understood from Elder Jewell that the inmates of the place had rolled oats, sugar and milk, bread and butter, sometimes fish and other times meat, but more often baked beans. Two meals are served each day. These men went to the place on account of the stories they have heard.

Mrs. Phelps has thus far been unable to secure any trace of her daughter May. Although Elder Jewell has said that she is in Boston she cannot be found there. Inquiries made at the Boston headquarters met with denials, but word has been received here that a woman of the cult in Boston knows where the girl is. Counsel for Mrs. Phelps will investigate this matter.

Think She Is a Prisoner.

The general feeling here is that May Phelps is held a prisoner in the tower room of the tabernacle at Shiloh, the building known as "Truth." It was here that people watching with field glasses assert they saw the girl signaling at the window.

Speaking of the money received Elder Jewell to-day said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"The Lord has answered our prayers. During the last two days over $5,000 has been received with which to buy the winter's supplies of fuel, food and clothing.

"We may have been short of food during the last few months, but we have had enough such as it was."

SOON FOLLOWS WIFE IN DEATH

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Jule Keene, for thirty years treasurer of the "Buffalo Bill" Wild West Show, died to-day at the Ashland House, surrounded by members of his family, who yesterday followed his wife to the grave in Greenwood Cemetery. Mr. Keene was unaware of his wife's death. She had been at the Ashland House seriously ill for a month, and a week ago he was summoned to her side. Ten days ago he became ill, and a few days later he was forced to go to bed, ill with acute Bright's disease.

Jule Keene began life as a German comedian, and was one of the first who introduced to the stage the present style of German comedy and clog shoe dancing.

UNITARIANS IN ANNUAL SESSION

The fortieth annual session of the Norfolk conference of Unitarian churches is being held to-day in the First Parish Church at Dedham. The principal discussion is over the question: "Are Churches Meeting the Religious Need of Modern Life?" The Rev. Edward Everett Hale, the Rev. Ernest W. Hunt of Wollaston and the Rev. H. G. Spaulding of Brookline discuss the question. Officers are chosen at the afternoon session.

When Your Liver Goes Wrong

—the bowels become clogged, bilious headache sets in, the appetite fails and the stomach sickens. All these troubles come from a lack of bile, which the liver cannot secrete unless it is kept in an active and healthy condition. Bile is the natural cathartic of the bowels, and all is well so long as the liver is able to supply it in sufficient quantity. When the liver becomes sluggish there is a lack of bile and a dose or two of

is needed to furnish gentle exercise for the liver, give it the needed assistance, and to strengthen the bile glands to resume their important work. The bowels then act, the kidneys are stimulated, all poisonous matter is carried off through the natural channels, and liver, stomach and bowels work together again in healthy harmony.

Few medicines can bring about this happy condition, but Beecham's Pills are doing it everyday for thousands. They have been the peoples' remedy for over half a century. No surface work about Beecham's Pills. They are a constitutional tonic that supplies the sluggish liver with power to secrete the bile, and their far-reaching properties quickly

CAR TOOK TO SIDEWALK OFF SLIPPERY RAILS

Brakes Wouldn't Hold on Worn Track of B. & N. in Lynn; Passengers Shaken Up.

NARROWLY MISSED A TREE

LYNN, Oct. 31.—Because the rails were slippery from rain and badly worn a car on the belt line of the Boston & Northern Street Railway Company here jumped from the track as it was descending Friend street from Green street to-day, plowed across the street and ran for some distance along the sidewalk before it was stopped. Seven passengers who were in the car at the time made a rush for the doors to escape, but before any one could leap out the car stopped. No one was hurt.

Mrs. J. H. Sullivan of No. 129 Brookline street received a severe nervous shock and was taken to her home as a result of fright.

No blame attaches to Motorman Murray Hamilton nor to Conductor John Noyes. The brakes had been set as the car started down the steep hill and the power had been shut off. The car slid for some distance and then left the worn rails. It narrowly missed striking a tree in its wild career.

HEARST APPEAL IS SUSTAINED

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 31.—The Court of Appeals last night handed down a decision affirming the right of the Independence League of New York city to make nominations by multiple petitions.

The court also decided that in the judicial nominations the judicial certificate filed first had prior claim and that the Independence League had the right to designate its own candidates.

Some Facts for the New England Advertiser:

If you're not using the BOSTON AMERICAN you are not advertising to the best advantage in New England.

You will agree that the greater the number of people reached, the greater will be the proportion of buyers for your particular goods.

The net paid circulation of the BOSTON AMERICAN every weekday is 50 per cent. greater than the combined circulation of all the other evening newspapers and evening editions of morning newspapers printed in Boston.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has the largest bona fide, net paid circulation in New England.

The gain in the circulation of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN in 1905 was greater than the combined gain of all the other Sunday newspapers printed in Boston.

It means an enormous saving in Advertising Funds when you can with one newspaper reach the same number of people as are reached by two or three other newspapers combined.

VOUCHER GONE FROM AUDITOR'S OFFICE---MORAN

SENSATIONAL CHARGE FIRES BIG AUDIENCE

Special to the Boston American.

GREENFIELD, Oct. 31.—John B. Moran, Democratic and Independence League candidate for Governor, in a thrilling ending to his masterful address at the Independence League rally in Northampton last night and later at his big rally here, made fresh charges of corruption on the part of some of the members of the present Republican administration. He demanded of Governor Guild the instant removal from office as chairman of the Jamestown Commission of Wilson H. Fairbanks, and either the withdrawal of State Auditor Henry E. Turner from his fight for re-election or the instant dismissal of the subordinate, if it was one, guilty of allowing papers to be taken from the auditor's office once they had been filed.

Mr. Moran accused Auditor Turner or one of his subordinates of giving to Commissioner Fairbanks a bill of $77 which Mr. Moran said was one of the vouchers signed by the female stenographer of Mr. Fairbanks. He characterized the signing of the papers by the stenographer as forgery.

"But," said Mr. Moran, the girl swears she did not know it was criminal.

The applause when Mr. Moran called for a Governor who would not conceal a crime until the District Attorney himself found it out was deafening.

Launched Sensation.

He asked for a Governor who had affiliations with no man, who was not controlled by any boss and who recognized only two bosses, his oath of office and the confidence of the people who elected him to office.

He said he had a reputation that no man living dare attack.

Following directly his remarks about Governor Guild's acceptance of a check for $100 for an address which the people of Springfield thought was being delivered out of sympathy for the late President McKinley, Mr. Moran launched the new sensation of the campaign.

He said that when Assistant District Attorney Dwyer went to the office of the State Auditor, he found that the unlawful voucher had been removed from the office and charged its removal to Wilson H. Fairbanks. "The bill," said the District Attorney, "is now in the hands of a man who will never return it to its proper place and the ends of justice may therefore be defeated."

Mr. Moran then charged Auditor Turner with neglect of office and said: "If one paper could be removed, others could be."

Mr. Moran also took up Governor Guild's answer regarding the check for his McKinley eulogy. He said: "Governor Guild said he took it because there was a surplus," and asked then how the bank robber would fare before a jury if he asked to be acquitted for robbing a bank because there was a surplus.

He said when Governor Guild paid his tribute to McKinley's memory that people who listened to him never thought for a moment that he was being paid money for it. (Deafening applause.)

He said that Governor Guild was so afraid of what he said that he prepared his speeches in advance and sent them to the newspapers; that a few mornings ago he was so afraid that the Boston newspapers would publish something he said and that the people would read it in print that he called up a certain Boston newspaper at 2 o'clock in the morning to be sure it would not use his statement. (Wild applause.)

He told Governor Guild in answer to his statement that it was beneath his dignity to meet Mr. Moran in public debate, that on January 1 Governor Guild would be walking arm and arm with John B. Moran, the next Governor of Massachusetts, and would be glad of the honor. (Prolonged applause.)

Cheers All Along Line.

When Senator Lodge and his political partners receive a full report of John B. Moran and E. Gerry Brown's triumphant entry and grand reception in the Berkshires, the stronghold of Massachusetts Republicanism they will without doubt turn to their ordnance department and pick out their heaviest artillery to again turn the people back to the control of the bosses.

At Easthampton a crowd of voters, who have always hitherto stood by the Republican party, listened and cheered with enthusiasm.

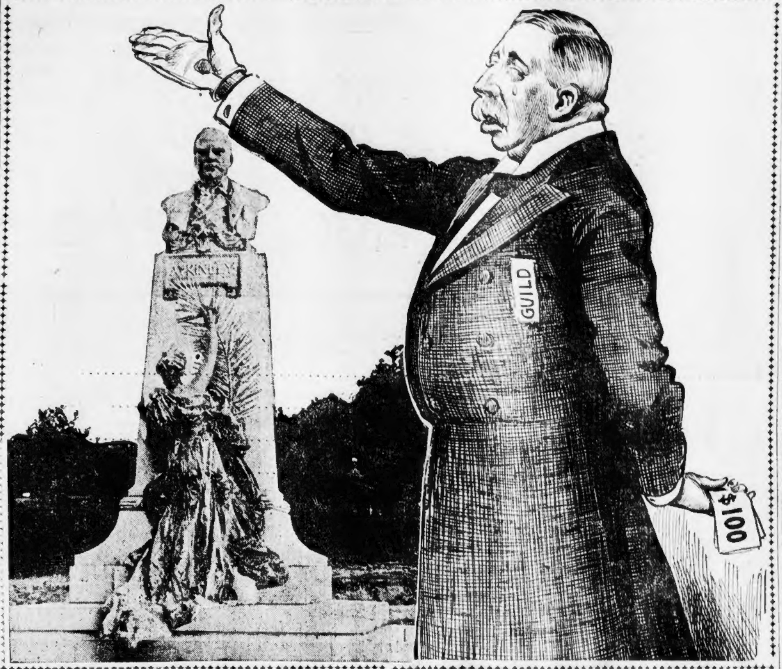
A few miles further in Hampshire county, the voters gathered in City Hall in Northampton and the municipal Democratic and State Republican city gave the candidate a welcome that must have warmed his heart.

In Franklin county the voters waited in Washington hall, Greenfield, for nearly three hours for the candidate to arrive and when he did come all their pent-up enthusiasm was let loose like the firing of a battery of machine guns.

In Northampton John B. Moran had the greatest opportunity to show up his old fiery spirit. The Independence Leaguers gave him cheer after cheer.

Mr. Moran's health is very much improved. He did not collapse once last night and his voice was in fine condition.

$100 WORTH OF EULOGY.



"All this is perfectly true; what of it?"—Governor Guild's reply at Brockton to Moran's charge that he accepted $100 for his eulogy at the dedication of the Springfield monument to McKinley.

RESCUE RULE FROM TRUST GRIP--BROWN

Special to the Boston American.

NORTHAMPTON, Oct. 31.—E. Gerry Brown, Democratic and Independence League candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, was right at home last night in this stronghold of Republicanism, and at Easthampton with the web weavers. At this place the Independence Leaguers held sway, and their audience was made up of voters who were out to learn things.

At Easthampton Mr. Brown followed Mr. Moran on the platform, and when he stepped forth to address the audience he received an ovation that lasted four minutes.

Before the rally a red light procession occurred. The villagers lined the streets and red fire burned brightly along the line of march. Mr. Brown occupied a carriage with Fred J. Gough, presiding officer of the rally. Cheers greeted him on the line of march and the students at Williston Seminary shouted an old college song, using Brown's name in the chorus. After his rally in Easthampton an auto whirled Mr. Brown to this city, where the crowd had waited over an hour for him and applauded him enthusiastically on his arrival.

Mr. Brown was filled with enthusiasm and his discussion of economic questions, his defence of labor unions and his condemnation of the great corporation were roundly applauded. His reference to natural and human rights, which corporations not only sought but took from the people, was wildly cheered.

Against Billboard Campaign.

In opening, he took from Governor Guild's inaugural address the abstract which condemned the use of large sums of money for campaign purposes. Said Mr. Brown: Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., in his inaugural said: "The spending of scores of thousands of dollars on posters and advertising is not corrupt in itself, but when a citizen, asked by his fellow citizens to take public office, is forced to contemplate such large expenditures as a necessity, the obvious result is to drive the man of modest means from public life. Let us not, in Massachusetts, make it impossible for some future Samuel Adams to be a candidate for Governor."

Mr. Brown then told his audience that Governor Guild was now doing that which he in his inaugural set himself down as opposing, by flooding the Commonwealth with posters of himself and his running mate. (Applause).

Easthampton being a web weaving centre, Mr. Brown reviewed the action of Lieutenant-Governor Draper in the long fight against the union, the amalgamated goring web weavers (wild applause). He pointed out Mr. Draper to the people as the personification of special privileges under protection. He asked why Draper did not present one argument in favor of the stand-pat position he had taken in the tariff and said Mr. Draper was wasting time telling his hearers he was being abused and omitting to specify in what particular he had been misrepresented. He declared that this is the year when all good citizens should voice their protest against existing conditions if they desired any relief.

"The declaration of rights of men and citizens issued by the national assembly of France in 1789," he said, "declared that: 'Ignorant neglect or contempt of human rights are the sole causes of public misfortune and corruptions of government,' and then set forth first: 'Men are born and always continue free and equal in respect of their rights. Civil distinctions therefore can only be found upon public utility;' second: 'The end of all political associations is the preservation of the national and impressible rights of man and these rights are liberty, property, security and resistance of oppression.' "

The Overtime Bill and its aftermath, namely the appointment of Dana to the bench, was discussed amidst deafening applause. His exposure of corporations, with their watered stock, their special privileges and their enthronement outside the government, enabling them to govern and control the people's own property, was listened to with the closest attention.

His extolling of the priciples of Democracy and his eloquent plea for the people to take back into their hands the lost control of their government aroused his audience to enthusiasm.

Mr. Brown was registered at the Draper House, and his first question on hearning the name of the hotel was to ask if Eben Draper owned it. On being assured Mr. Draper had no interest in it, he said that if Mr. Draper did own it, it would surely be a corporation house.

WAGE EARNERS OF WARD 9 INDORSE BROWN WITH FERVOR

Enthusiastically indorsing the candidacy of E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant-Governor and that of David X. Coughlan for School Board, the Wage Earners' Club of Ward 9 is to-day preparing to do effective work in politics during the few remaining days of the present campaign.

The wage earners of Ward 9 met last evening and organized by electing Joseph G. Gill president and George B. Wheeler secretary. These two officials were also selected to act as delegates to the Central Wage Earners' Club. It was also voted to co-operate with the Independence League of Massachusetts in politics and to have a rally next month.

The resolution indorsing the candidacy of E. Gerry Brown, Democratic and Independence League candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, which was unanimously adopted, is as follows:

"Resolved, That we, the members of Ward 9 Wage Earners' Club, heartily indorse E. Gerry Brown for Lieutenant Governor, believing that labor's rights can be best subserved by his election, and call upon all friends to oppose the re-election of Eben S. Draper, as his attitude in the past in regard to labor has been detrimental to its best interests."

CANDY CATHARTIC
THEY WORK WHILE YOU SLEEP

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

10¢ 25¢ 50¢
ALL DRUGGISTS.

CANDY CATHARTIC — Cascarets taste good. Eat them like candy. They remove any bad taste in the mouth, leaving the breath sweet and perfumed. It is a pleasure to take them, and they are liked especially by children.

SWEETEN THE STOMACH — Cascarets sweeten the stomach by cleansing the mouth, throat and food channel. That means, they stop undigested food from souring in the stomach, prevent gas forming in the bowels, and kill disease germs of any kind that breed and feed in the entire system.

PURELY VEGETABLE — Cascarets are purely vegetable and contain no mercurial or other mineral poison. They consist of the latest discoveries in medicine, and form a combination of remedies unequaled to make the blood pure and rich and make clean skin and beautiful complexion.

LIVER TONIC — Cascarets tone the stomach and bowels and stir up the lazy liver. They do not merely soften the stools and cause their discharge, but strengthen the bowels and put them into lively, healthy condition, making their action natural.

MILD BUT SURE — Cascarets never grip nor gripe. They act quietly, positively and never cause any kind of uncomfortable feeling. Taken regularly they make the liver act regularly and naturally as it should. They keep the sewerage of the body properly moving and keep the system clean.

BOON FOR MOTHERS — Cascarets increase the flow of milk in nursing mothers. If the mother eats a tablet, it makes her milk mildly purgative and has a mild but certain effect on the baby. In this way they are the only safe laxative for the nursing infant.

CURE CONSTIPATION — Cascarets taken patiently, persistently, will cure any form of constipation, no matter how old or how often other remedies have failed. They are absolutely guaranteed to cure any case, or purchase money will be cheerfully refunded.

NEVER SOLD IN BULK — Cascarets cost 10c, 25c, 50c a box. Samples sent free for the asking. We publish no testimonials but sell Cascarets on their merit under absolute guarantee to cure. Buy and try a box to-day, or write us for free samples and booklet.

A Proven Mine for the Price of a Prospect!

On the South, adjoins the now famous GOLD BAR PROPERTY, whose shares were first issued at 17c and have since sold at $2.05 (now $1.27).

On the East, adjoins the GOLD KING GROUP, whose shares were first issued at 15c, since sold at 40c; now 34c.

On the North, adjoins the CARNATION GROUP, whose shares were first issued at 25c; now 75c.

On the West, adjoins the GOLD BAR ANNEX GROUP, whose shares were first issued at 12c; now 32c.

Within 600 feet west of the HOMESTAKE (has the same vein), whose shares were first issued at 75c; now $1.27.

Within 1500 feet of the DAISY (has the same vein), whose shares were first issued at 15c; now 45c.

The Surest Thing In Mining:

That the Original Gold Bar Will Greatly Advance Over the Present Issue Price

Eight distinct veins have been discovered so far on this property, four running to the North and South and an equal number to the East and West.

The entire Gold Bar Mountain is heavily mineralized, and further development will undoubtedly prove the existence of veins other than those already mentioned. As these veins, without exception, extend into the adjoining properties, where they have been opened to a considerable depth, and there show big values, it is practically certain that the same values will be found on this ground as depth is gained; and the delay in opening this property has been due solely to the fact that the development of the adjoining properties would determine the value of this ground, as the veins are identically the same.

The veins extending in the Gold King Group on the East at a depth of 160 feet, shows shipping values of $200 per ton; while on the Homestake Group, 600 feet to the East, at the 300-foot level, the vein is 160 feet wide and will ALL average better than $30 per ton.

Three of the veins running North and South enter into the GOLD BAR PROPERTY. The main GOLD BAR vein is the largest in the District, being 178 feet wide, with an average value of $12 per ton for the whole vein, while small parts show shipping values of $1,600 to the ton.

In our opinion a purchase of the ORIGINAL GOLD BAR stock at the issue price of 20c per share, is equivalent to BUYING A DOLLAR FOR FIFTY CENTS; and we believe the stock will show a premium over the issue price of a HUNDRED PER CENT WITHIN SIXTY DAYS!

The value of the veins having been proven by the devolpments in the adjoining properties, which completely surround this group, takes this property out of the prospect class and at once makes it a MINE.

As such we recommend it as the most desirable among the many good Bullfrog properties on the market to-day.

Reservations should be made by telegraph, to insure consideration, and remittance in full, by bank draft or certified check, must be forwarded immediately after allotment is made.

NO ONE WILL FIGHT LONELY MR. JOHNSON

By TAD.

There is a sign over the National Athletic Club in Philadelphia which reads, "Boy Wanted." Mr. McGuigan, a large employer, is the gent who wants the boy, but it must be a big one, a willing boy and one who is not afraid of work.

He is to act as bumper for the Johnson Express, which will arrive in Philadelphia on November 10.

McGuigan has very kindly set aside this day for the benefit of Arthur. This large dash of soot has a few wallops that he would like to toss away, but the job is to get the big boy to toss them at.

Berger, O'Brien, Burns and Kaufmann screwed out some months ago and got on the very edge of the country 'way out West. If they had a pier that reached out ten miles farther west we would probably find them there, but as it is they are now as far away from here as they can get.

Arthur is so anxious to get a match that he's actually getting baldheaded. He wrote the other day and said that his hair was falling out so fast now that he could comb it with a towel, and that soon he would resemble a Russian bomb on top.

He says as much as he loved those meals that Honey Johnson used to feed his little son Arthur down in Galveston, Tex., he would willingly pass them up to get a slam at our great heavyweight champions.

Cheer up, Arthur. It's a long alleyway that has no ash barrel.

Joe Gans announced the other day that he had relinquished his claim upon the welterweight title and would hereafter tend to his affairs in the lightweight class.

Well, that's a hit. Since when did Joe become the welterweight champion? Didn't know he ever beat Joe Walcott for the leaves. Remember their meeting in 'Frisco and the referee calling it a draw, but don't ever remember Joe beating the little Boston demon.

Funny notions some of these fellows get. He might have been the saddle-colored welterweight champion. Joe Thomas is the lily white welterweight champion. But there's a coal-black gent up in Boston who still has all the colors and all the scalps hanging to his belt. Until we hear of some one spilling Mr. Walcott over the ring we will have to cut the loose talk and slip it to Walcott.

ATTELL PROVES TOO CLEVER FOR BAKER

BY C. E. VAN LOAN.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 31.—When the bell rang at the end of the twentieth round it found Abe Attell and Harry Baker fighting like two little tigers, and when referee Robinson hoisted Attell's glove, Baker threw his hands up and staggered to his corner crying like a child. But a man who earns a draw with a world's champion must fight him for it, and though Baker started bravely, his fight from the twelfth round on lost him any chance for consideration.

Eddie Robinson made the only decision possible under the circumstances. He had nothing to go by but the points, for there was no punishment to speak of, and on points it was certainly Attell's fight by a large majority.

Baker started well. He came up dancing and making play with his left hand. He scored several times in the first minute of the fight and always with his straight left to the head. When Attell tried to rush him off his feet, Baker covered neatly and stalled until Attell stepped back. Then it was the left jab again and the bell found the crowd cheering wildly for the little challenger.

Second Round Was Baker's.

The second round was also Baker's. Once he caught Abe going away and poked him on the side of the head with a lightning jolt. Attell staggered and fell, for the blow pushed him off his balance. Attell rushed Baker clear across the ring and swung as he rushed Baker into a neutral corner. Baker ducked and Abe went to his knees. He was up again like a rubber ball and before Baker could throw up his guard Abe was through it with a straight to the head. The second round was one of the fastest in the whole fight but it was Baker's.

In the third round Baker's seconds claimed a foul and again in the fifth Baker went up on his toes just as Attell shot in a stomach punch and though it was not technically speaking a foul, it was close enough to one to worry the men who bet two to one.

As Attell came out of his corner for the sixth round he complained to Robinson that Baker was jumping off the floor and thus taking body punches lower than Attell intended to send them. Baker retorted, and the men stood in the centre of the ring banging each other at a great rate. The round was not a very fast one, and in the seventh the bad blood cropped out again. This time Baker began it by complaining to the referee and Attell called him a cry baby and taunted him with trying to win the fight on a foul.

Called Baker "Cry Baby."

"Little cry baby," said Abe. Bing! Bing! Bing! with the left under Harry's nose. "Never fought a cry baby before," said Abe. Bing once more. At the end of the round Baker was thoroughly on the defensive for the first time during the fight.

In the eighth round Baker, ducking to get away from the belly punches, jumped clear off the floor. Referee Robinson in his statement given after the fight says that Baker seemed to be trying to win the fight on a foul, and in spite of several warnings he repeated the jumping trick during the in-fighting.

The eleventh round gave Attell a good lead. The last minute of the fight was the fiercest in the long contest. Baker fought like a wild man and Attell met him blow for blow. It was like a fight between amateurs who know nothing more than the old haymaker's punches, and the boys flayed away until the bell rang. The house was in a great uproar and the bell could not have been heard ten feet from the ring. Without a second's hesitation Robinson jumped between them and hoisted Attell's glove.

The decision was not a popular one, but it was just and Referee Robinson deserves great credit for standing by his convictions.

HARVARD DOESN'T FAVOR JAMESTOWN REGATTA

"It's very doubtful," said Coach Wray of the Harvard crew this morning, "that we will send a crew to Jamestown next Summer. I'm almost positive that neither Cambridge nor Oxford will ever consent to send a crew here to race for any money-making scheme, such as the exposition will be. The English ideas of sport differ from ours, as you know. Should they decide in favor of the plan, however, I think that you will see a Harvard crew on the scene, and with just as good a one as we had this year, too."

The entry of the Harvard shell seems to hinge entirely on the acceptance of the Englishmen. Captain Bacon, who was also approached on the subject, said that Harvard is entirely undecided.

"We are not over anxious to send a boat down there," said he. "If we do, however, it will be the same one, less two of the men that rowed this year. These two places are filled by very good men. Morgan will go as stroke instead of rowing No. 3, as formerly. The lineup would be: Bow, Tappan; stroke, Morgan; Lunt, 2; Glass, 3; Richardson, 4; Bacon, 5, and Faulkner or Severns, 6; coxswain, Blagden.

BROWN TEAM HARD AT WORK

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 31.—Coach Robinson feels confident that the Brown eleven will make a creditable showing against Harvard at Cambridge Saturday. Yesterday the men had the hardest work of the season, and the trick plays that will be used against the Crimson were thoroughly tried out.

Brown will be greatly strengthened for the Harvard game, as it has just been announced that Centre Cortland and Left End Pryor, who have been out of the game this season for various reasons, will be able to resume play. Also, Brown will be considerably fortified by the presence of Corp at fullback.

CHANGES FOR GREEN ELEVEN

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 31.—It is rumored that several radical changes will be made in the Dartmouth line in anticipation of the Princeton game Saturday. It is likely that two new men will be placed at ends, both of heavyweight, so as to stop the mighty rushes of the Tigers' backs.

The green eleven was coached behind closed gates yesterday, and the snow which fell only served to stimulate the men to harder work. The student body was much surprised when they found out that they would not be able to see their prides work, and they are wondering what Coach Folsom has up his sleeve to spring on the Tiger team.

NOVEL CONTESTS FOR MOTORISTS SATURDAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The interest in the gymkanha games of the Bay State Automobile Association on the Newton athletic ground Saturday afternoon next increases daily. There is no question but what the majority of local operators anxious to gain fame and display their ability in the control and management of their cars will be on hand to battle for prizes. Within the last day or two the committee in charge of the same has received numerous entries, and as things look now there will be a most amusing and interesting session. H. H. Hawkins, who made such an excellent showing in similar games at Worcester a short time ago, has entered his Grout gasoline car in all events, while the twenty horsepower Maxwell, which is now in New York, about to start back for Boston, has been likewise entered. This will be driven by either Ralph Coburn or Lucius J. Taylor, the two men who drove it almost 2,700 miles without once stopping the engine. C. W. Kelsey, the man who won the Deming trophy will also be a contestant. President Speare of the association has made three entries, and others are bound to come.

It is believed that this will be the most amusing auto event that has ever been held in this section, as events such as listed are always productive of funny situations. Speed is a secondary consideration; in fact, there are at least two events in which the operators will be called upon to give an exhibition of their judgment of speed.

The 1907 Pierce arrived in Boston yesterday. It is one of the finest looking cars that has ever come to Boston, and J. W. Maguire of the J. W. Maguire Company is probably proud of the same. The car sets about three inches lower than its immediate predecessor; is longer wheel base, giving more seating capacity in the tonneau, which is equipped with two revolving chairs. In finish and appointment the car is all that can be desired. It is equipped with two complete systems of ignition, he Sims-Bosch magneto, and four individual coils. The car has attracted a great deal of attention, as the Pierce Great Arrow still holds the Glidden trophy for 1906, which it won so handsomely in 1905.

"Twin" Calls McGarry-Deshler Fight Even Thing, Although Former Should Have Won

CHELSEA BOUT DECLARED A DRAW

That fighters do not make the best of referees was established last night at the Lincoln A. C., when Mike Twin Sullivan called the fifteen-round bout between Andy McGarry of New York and Dave Deshler of Cambridge a draw. There was no doubt that the verdict the lighter of the celebrated Twins gave was an honest one, but those who kept tabs on the bout as it went along were unanimous that the Manhattan boy should have been given the award.

From the first gong the Irish Harp from Gotham carried the fighting to the Hub boy and there was only one round out of the fifteen which could be given to Deshler.

Such rough house, forcible tactics as the New Yorker displayed were never seen in the Chelsea ring before, and it was all to Deshler's credit that he escaped from a decisive defeat by superior cleverness. McGarry was too strong and Deshler's offense never had any effect on his tough body, which gave him the aspect of a Tom Sharkey in the ring.

Looked a Young Hercules.

Bulging all over with muscle from his waist up, with enormous shoulders for a boy his size, he looked a young Hercules, and his bull-like fighting was too great an obstacle for the shifty Cambridge boxer to break down.

Deshler did his best to work inside and do execution on the burly form of his antagonist, but McGarry was always perfectly willing to take a chance, depending on his greater strength and hitting power to offset Deshler's methods, as he was aware that nothing could withstand his ferocious rushes, as he was no match for the local boy in exchanges of skill. He exhibited clearly the fighting force backed up by almost superhuman muscular development tipped off with a pair of husky arms which were like iron when once in action.

Deshler avoided a lot of harm to himself by slipping away from McGarry's firey onslaughts, but at the mixing game he had it on McGarry, handling his fists with greater speed and besting the visitor at short arm work. McGarry was always willing to tie up when the swapping started and he was close up, as Deshler was miles too fast for him in ramming home body jolts and chops to the head.

With Punch of a "Heavy."

With the punch of a heavyweight McGarry proved conclusively that he is one of the most dangerous of the fistic stars who ever stepped in the local limelight. His tremendous hitting and immunity to punishment made him look about the most formidable proposition which has graced the Chelsea stage. There was no let up in his charging after Deshler and he never seemed to tire from it. He had little direction in his blows and gave every indication of being a crude article, and there was never sting enough to Deshler's wallops to make him hesitate in his boring in style.

As Jack Sheehan, the man agreed upon by both boys to act as referee, was unable to fill the position, they selected Mike Twin Sullivan, the well-known lightweight, to officiate and he went along all right till the time for rendering the decision came and it was generally conceded that Deshler was the favored one when he declared it a draw.

A batch of three-round bouts furnished some exhilarating entertainment for the fans opened the show and brought out a bunch of unheard of talent.

Peter Mahaer of Cambridge got the decision over Young Smiley from the same burg at the end of three sessions. Joe Kane and Young Selloff went to a draw. Charlie Mitchell decided to quit to Young Neary in one round, but the gem of the lot was a mirth provoker when Jim Rowe, who looked very much like a bike rider named McDonald, hooked up with Young Smith of Saxonville. The former was saved entire annihilation by his seconds heaving the sponge in the second round.

Freddie O'Brien was awarded the medal over Denney Ryan in the six-round semi-final, though there was considerable opposition to the verdict. Ryan substituted for Tommy Rawson, who decided to remain an amateur a little longer.

Fight by Rounds.

ROUND ONE—McGarry opened up by rushing in and they clinched. He rushed again, swinging wild, and Deshler caught him in his arms. Deshler stepped inside with a snappy left to the body when McGarry rushed. He worked it again as McGarry came on. McGarry missed a short right swing and Deshler raked with left and right underneath. Deshler fastened left hook to jaw, but it failed to stop McGarry, who waded in with wide left and right.

ROUND TWO—Deshler got his left going, snapping it on McGarry's nose. He stabbed and swung right on body. McGarry chased him around the ring, but Deshler tied up. Dave put over a nice straight left which mushed McGarry's face. McGarry flashed over a hard right to head and uppercut with right, ripping along the body. Deshler jabbed with left as McGarry came on. He got a right to the body at the gong.

McGarry Landed a Dandy One.

ROUND THREE—Deshler jabbed and rapped on body with right. He rushed and counted on body with right. McGarry, in his wild smashing, landed a lucky one to the head. He drove right to body and rushed in. He caught Deshler with another right but Deshler countered him. Deshler chopped the kidneys in clinch. McGarry put over a soxdolger to the head and Deshler planted on the jaw just at the end of the round.

ROUND FOUR—McGarry rushed twice but Deshler blocked him. McGarry nearly fell swinging right as Deshler pulled away. He tore in again and put right to body. Deshler hooked left to body and stabbed with right for wind. The Cambridge lad hooked left to frame but got two nasty uppercuts which he half blocked. It was Deshler going to the bell as he put right and then left to body while McGarry swung on his arms.

ROUND FIVE—Deshler landed right to jaw as McGarry came to him and pummeled on the wind in the clinch with both hands. Deshler tried rushing but nearly came to grief by running into a right to the heart and the blow seemed to sink in. Deshler jabbed clean with left, but received a right uppercut which his glove stopped on his chin.

ROUND EIGHT—McGarry rushed trying to sweep Deshler off his feet. Deshler straightened his left to the face. McGarry got to the jaw with right and began to force in earnest. Deshler uppercut as McGarry, thinking he had him, went at him like a beast. Deshler got his left to head and McGarry slammed over right to jaw. McGarry with all steam aboard ploughed in, but Deshler got out of a tight place. McGarry slipped down, but was on again in an instant.

ROUND NINE—McGarry rushed and Deshler, by ducking, got out of the way of a destructive right swing. Deshler jabbed but it was nothing to the one McGarry handed him. Deshler tried to land right, but fell short. He jabbed as McGarry came in. He flattened McGarry's features with straight left and scored on right to body. As McGarry jumped in he got right and left on body. McGarry got right over and Deshler ran into another which hurt him.

Deshler Swung Right to Wind.

ROUND ELEVEN—Deshler swung right to the wind as McGarry came on. Mac got right over to jaw, but it was a half swing and did no damage. He hooked to the body with smoky left. Deshler sent crushing right to body and McGarry got busy, but his swing went on Deshler's back. Deshler countered with left to body and repeated. He got inside with his left, welting the body, and blocked McGarry's swings. Several lefts to the belt region put Deshler in front.

McGarry Reached Dave.

RONUD THIRTEEN—McGarry, with unabated strength, tore in. He reached Dave with right as he was trying to back off. Dave caught him a wicked uppercut with right which made Mac's teeth rattle. McGarry never stopped up and Dave put over right to jaw. McGarry never slacked but jabbed and swung for body. He rounded his right, but it went over Dave's head. Going the last half it was McGarry forcing the issue, with Dave trying to get inside.

ROUND FOURTEEN—Deshler's jabbing sent McGarry pointing wild. McGarry received a right uppercut as he piled in. Mac got even by smashing on jaw with right when Deshler rushed. Deshler jabbed and uppercut as Mac tried to overwhelm him by rushing. In a mix-up Dave shone the most brilliantly. Just before the bell McGarry dropped Deshler with a crushing right, but he was on his feet again.

ROUND FIFTEEN—Deshler uppercut with right and kept up the trick, but McGarry rushed him too hard. Dave was game and held his head under the furious rushes of the Gothamite. He was going well till near the bell, when McGarry put over his right and slowed him up.

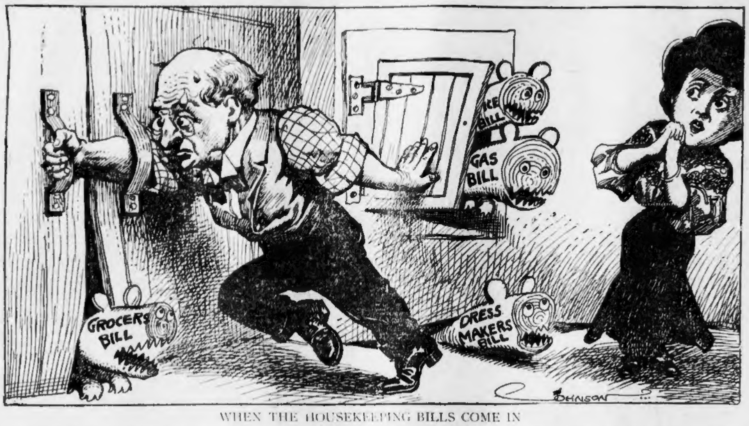
Ten Commandments for Married Men

Count the Cost of Marriage Before It Is Too Late

By Dorothy Dix



WHEN THE HOUSEKEEPING BILLS COME IN

THE first commandment of the married man is this:

Thou shalt not marry until thou art willing to pay the price.

It is a most curious and significant fact that this country, which is the only country in the world where every match is practically a love match, should lead the world in the number of divorces.

In this land of the free and home of the matrimonially daring every man and woman picks out his or her mate unrestricted by anything but sentiment and unguided by anything but fancy. Few marry for money, fewer still for social position and none at their parents' bidding.

We look with horror upon European matches arranged by the families of the high contracting parties. We shudder at the thought of the English mother who frankly goes husband hunting for her daughters. We think with disdain of the prudent French parents who commence laying by a dowry for their daughter as soon as she is born, to the end that she may make a good match when she is grown.

"Thank Heaven," we say with self-righteous congratulation, "no such sordid consideration as money enters into our marriages." And we marry upon this platform ,and quarrel over the monthly bills, and—get divorces.

The Haunting Ghost

FOR the plain truth is that the money question will not down. It springs up at every turn, the haunting ghost, the skeleton at the feet of matrimony, and it is because men are not prepared to meet it, and will not meet it, fairly and squarely, and honestly, that so many marriages are failures.

For some curious and inexplicable reason American men will not talk frankly to the women with whom they are in love about money. They will not even mention the subject to them. Not one lover in a thousand ever tells the girl he is asking to marry him what his means are. He is extravagantly generous to her, and smothers her in flowers and candies and theatre tickets and things that he cannot afford, as likely as not, and this naturally leads her to suppose that when she marries him she will not have to worry her little head about the cost of things. Still less does she have a prophetic vision of herself getting up in the night and going through his pockets to extract enough small change to buy a glass of soda water.

If she did, or even if she could imagine the things he would say when she asks for money for household expenses—my, but what a falling off there would be in the number of weddings.

There is no use in anyone blinking the fact that three-fourths of the troubles of married life are directly traceable to the friction engendered by money or the lack of it. It fills a woman with rage and temper and tongue every time she has to go to her husband as a mendicant for the money that she knows that she has earned by keeping his house and cooking his meals and mending his clothes and nursing his children, and when her just demands are met, as they only too often are, with lectures on extravagance, and groans of self-pity for having to support a creature so expensive, she is more than woman if she fails to make the retort that doesn't turn away wrath.

The attitude of the average man toward his wife about money would be amusing if the woman did not have to suffer so, for he acts as if he thought she was a miracle worker, who could run a house by simply waving a wand. It is apparently a never ending surprise to him to find out that beefsteaks cost money, that groceries are not delivered gratis, that furniture will break and clothes wear out.

In the majority of households the wife presents the bills with fear and trembling. She knows that they will be met with scowls and reproaches, and that she will stand tacitly accused in her husband's mind of having eaten all of the food, worn all of the clothes and monopolized all of the fuel and water and light that they represent.

The Price of Matrimony

I AM not denying that it is a hard and disillusioning thing to a man to have to spend his life, as most men do, toiling like a slave to support his family. Precious few men, after the monthly bills are paid, have anything left with which to indulge their own fancies, but the point I wish to insist upon is this—that it is the price of matrimony, and that no man has a right to marry unless he is willing to pay the piper cheerfully and willingly.

It isn't the wife's fault. She has done the best she could. She couldn't make the children's shoes everlasting, nor supply the table with manna straight from heaven without money and without price, and it is a bitter and a cruel injustice for a man to visit upon a woman the result of his own lack of foresight and prudence.

Every man who is thinking about marrying ought to pin over his desk a list of grocers' bills, and butchers' bills, and dry goods bills, and millinery bills, and doctors' bills and dentist bills, and shoemakers' bills, and all the other bills and ills to which matrimony is heir, and he should say them over and over, morning, noon and night, until he can repeat them backward in his sleep.

Then he won't be so surprised when he confronts these apparitions of family life on his own hearthstone. Nor should he stop at recognizing that marriage is an expensive luxury, and that a man has practically got to decide between an automobile and a wife, for most men can't support both. He should make up his mind that after he makes his choice he isn't going to complain about it.

Unless the society of the woman he loves is worth more to him than his club, unless he would rather be wrapped in love than be clothed in London-built coats, unless he would rather have the arms of his little children around his neck than sit in boxes at the play, let him keep out of matrimony. But if he chooses a wife instead of the fleshpots, let him not funk on his obligation. Let him deal fairly with his wife on the money question, and give her freely her share of what he earns.

For it is always to be borne in mind that no woman can marry a man unless he asks her to, and he is a pretty poor sort of a welcher if he begrudges the price.

Use Judgment in Selecting Diet for Young and Growing Children

"IF an ill-nourished child comes under your care," said a well-known doctor, lately, "give it a meal of a slice of thick bread, buttered on both sides, placing on the top of the butter either sugar or treacle."

This may be modified with no loss of nourishment and with great gain of cleanliness simply by substituting a thinner slice of bread, buttered on one side, for the thick slice buttered on both sides.

As a matter of fact, physicians have for a good while been ordering thin bread and butter as a substitute for cod liver oil, when this latter cannot be digested, or when people will not take it.

The reason is that butter is invaluable for the delicate and ill-nourished, because it is the most digestible form of fat.

It is far better than cream because it can be eaten on bread at every meal without causing biliousness.

Cream is extremely nourishing if it is digested, but the trouble is that it is by no means easily digested.

With most people it causes biliousness, unless eaten in very small quantities, and anything that has this effect will not nourish the body, although intrinsically it may be very nutritious.

Fat is one of the substances which are absolutely essential for the growth and proper development of the body. Strange to say, fat is necessary for the development of the bones as well as for the growth of flesh.

Children deprived of milk become rickety, chiefly because of the want of fat.

There is a great deal of fat in milk—that is to say, fresh, unskimmed milk.

The fat of milk is the cream, which in fresh milk that has not been allowed to stand for some hours is mixed up in the tiniest particles with the water, casein, salt and sugar of which milk, as a whole, is composed.

When it is in this extremely fine state of subdivision this milk-fat can very easily be digested. When the milk has stood and its fat has gathered together in a thick mass and risen to the top in the shape of cream, the matter is quite different; the fat is then concentrated and much more difficult of assimilation by the stomach, if it is eaten in any considerable quantity.

When made into butter, however, and taken spread upon bread, the case again is different.

Being mixed up with bread crumbs, chewed, and slowly swallowed, the fat again becomes subdivided into tiny particles, and reaches the stomach in a condition to be easily acted upon by the digestive juices.

This is why "thin bread and butter" is often ordered in place of cod liver oil.

Remember that it must not be "bread and scrape," but bread pretty thickly buttered. Don't be afraid that butter will cause biliousness.

It may do so if it is eaten on hot toast or hot cakes, but it won't if it is eaten on stale bread.

Fat contains the germs of new cellular growth. If we understand that every part of the body is composed of cells, on whose continual reconstruction its maintenance in life and health depends, we can easily comprehend how essential fat is. But it must be a digestible fat if it is to be of use.

To oblige children to eat meat fat when they have an absolute dislike to it is a great mistake which is made in many a nursery.

Some children actually shudder when a plate of fat meat is placed before them.

This is not a "fad," it is simply Nature's prompting that the fat would not agree with him.

You never yet found a child shudder at a slice of bread and butter thickly sugared over.

Why?

Not merely because it likes the idea of eating it, but also because Nature issues no silent command that discomfort will follow the eating.

There is no substitute for butter. No jam or marmalade or sugar or treacle, though all wholesome things in themselves, can possibly take the place of butter.

None of them contains the germs of new cellular growth.

This is what many people are ignorant of when they will not allow their children to eat butter with jam or marmalade. Well, they may save a few pennies by this foolish parsimony, but they defraud their children of one of the most important materials needed for the best development of their growing frames. This is not worth while, is it, even if the housekeeping money is somewhat saved thereby?

Even if You Never Marry You Need Not Become an Old-Fashioned Old Maid, You Can Be Happy

By Beatrice Fairfax

IN our grandmother's days a girl who was not married at twenty-five was considered a hopeless old maid.

Sixteen and seventeen were considered very fair ages at which to embark on matrimony's perilous seas.

At thirty a woman was looked upon as middle aged and entirely out of the running. She could knit and keep house and give advice, but that was about all that was expected of her, married or single.

Nowadays, however, woman's life is ordered on a very different basis. Only foolish little girls, who don't know any better, marry at sixteen.

Statistics show that the greatest number of marriages takes place between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-five, and a great many women of twenty-eight and thirty, and even thirty-five, marry. A woman is at her best between twenty-five and forty, and it is then that she should bring children into the world and raise a family.

But even if she never marries there is no reason why she should not become a most useful member of society.

Is No Reproach

IN olden days the term "old maid" was considered one of reproach. The unmarried woman had no place in the world. In the family she was supposed to be good only for doing odd jobs that no one else wanted to do. No one expected her to dress prettily or to have an opinion on any subject.

The younger member of the family ignored her, the elders looked upon her as a failure.

The natural result was that she finally settled into a peevish, disappointed, uninteresting nonentity.

The unmarried woman of to-day is a vastly different personage from her great-aunt. She is unmarried, sometimes from choice, sometimes because the right man did not ask her, but rarely from lack of opportunity to marry.

There is a place in the world for her, and she is filling it well.

With so many avenues open to her to earn her own living, she has developed into a capable, self-respecting woman, and, what is more, she commands the respect of her fellow-men.

Where there are a number of daughters in a family, and the oldest remains unmarried, she is in great danger of sinking into oblivion.

Adopt a Career

IN order to avoid that she must bestir herself and adopt a career. Even if there is no scarcity of money it is much better that she should make herself independent.

Of course, if all her sisters marry and her parents are still alive her place is with them. Making life cheerful for the old people is career enough for any woman. But if there is no necessity for her to stay at home she will be much happier if she has a mission in life.

If she has enough money to live on she can fill her life with working for others.

An idle woman is never a happy woman.

Youth, health, looks will linger long with her if she finds some congenial occupation.

Of course, a happy married life is the best of all careers for any woman. But matrimony is not for every woman, and so the ones who do not marry must make the best of things.

Don't despair because you are thirty and are still unmarried.

Plenty of women marry at that age, and if you alow your face to look discontented and sour you never will marry.

Men are looking for cheerful life companions, and peevishness will never attract them.

And even if you don't marry you must not let yourself become an old-fashioned old maid. Make up your mind to be a cheerful, lovable, happy unmarried woman.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

HOW ABOUT THE SISTER?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am very much in love with a young man whom I know is very fond of my sister. I love this man dearly, but would you please advise me how to win his love, as I know I could never love another man like I do him. My sister is very attractive; I am very plain, although I have been taking your advice to look neat and attractive in his eyes. I think it is a hard struggle to gain his love, so please advise me what to do, as I am in terrible distress. HEARTBROKEN.

MY dear, do you realize that you are deliberately trying to win your sister's sweetheart? Don't you know that you might make her very unhappy? Get your mind off this idea. You will learn to care for some one else in time, and no happiness could come to you through such treatment of your sister.

NO NECESSITY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I lost my mother about a year ago and she left seven children, of which I am the oldest—twenty-four years old—and a sister twenty-one years old, who keeps house. Now I am engaged to be married and capable of supporting a wife. The question is, would you advise me to give my sister preference of marrying first? L. E.

NO, if you are the first one engaged, there is no necessity for you to wait until your sister is married. You might go on waiting indefinitely. You owe something to your fiancee, and should not ask her to wait too long. Of course you can still act as the head of the family, the one to whom they would turn for advice on all matters.

DATE PUDDING

STONE and soak dates until quite soft. Beat two eggs with one-half cup of sugar and pinch of salt; one cup of tapioca, boiled soft; one pint of milk, one teaspoon vanilla. MRS. E. P. NUTTING.
No. 6 William street, Cambridge.

ECONOMICAL SOUP

TAKE a cold roast beef bone, pieces of beefsteak, the rack of a cold turkey or chicken, put them into a pot with three or four quarts of water, two carrots, three turnips, a few cloves, pepper and salt. Boil the whole gently four hours, then strain it through a colander, mashing the vegetables so that they will all pass through; skin off the fat; mix one tablespoonful of flour with two of water, stir it into the soup and boil ten minutes; serve this with dry toast, cut into a triangular form; this is a true and tried recipe. MRS. J. MULVANEY.
No. 10 Franklin street, Hudson.

RAGOUT OF BEEF

FOR six pounds of the round, take one-half dozen ripe tomatoes, three onions, a few cloves, stick cinnamon, dash of pepper and salt. Cut gashes in meat and fill with small pieces of salt pork; put the meat in a pan with other ingredients. Over this pour one cup of water, one-half cup vinegar. Cover tightly and bake slowly four hours. When done, strain the gravy and thicken with flour. This is very nice for a large family. A small family can take half the amount or it is nice cold. MRS. D. M. NORBERY.
No. 157 Rantoul street, Beverly.

BEEF SALAD

WHEN making vegetable soup boil your piece of beef (without cutting up), take out and allow to grow cold before too well done. When perfectly cold cut up quantity desired in very small chunks, put in salad bowl and mix well with it a handful of fresh parsley and one onion, cut fine (slice onion round ways), if you have it; a little celery, cut fine, but that is not necessary. Season well with salt, pepper, oil and vinegar (mix well) and let stand for twenty minutes before using. Take about one pound and a half of cooked beef. MRS. COLE.
N. 90 St. Botolph street, Boston.

THE HOUSE OF DOOM

A Romance of Love and Mystery

By GEORGE BARRY BRONSON

Synopsis

SIBYL BURNET playfully asks Wilfrid Hughes to marry her. He respectfully declines to be more than a friend. As she says she must marry some one, she selects Ellice Winsloe. She tearfully confesses that she has a secret which she dare not reveal. That night Eric Domville, Wilfrid's friend, tells him that he had seen Sibyl talking to a strange man in the neighboring wood. The man seemed to be her lover, and when she told him that she was going to marry Winsloe, he flew into a passion and threatened to reveal her secret if she did not marry him. She repelled his attempt at blackmail with indignation. Shortly after leaving the woods Domville hears a shot. Then a servant reports that a strange man had been found shot dead in the wood. Wilfrid and Eric believe they know Sibyl's secret. They steal out, search the dead body of the man, and take away all his letters. Before they are quite well finished they are interrupted by the arrival of the police.

After their return to the house Domville and Hughes read the letters they have taken from the dead man's pocket. From them they discover at least a part of Sibyl's secret—that at one time she had loved this man, known as John Parham, of Larchmont.

It is far beyond midnight when, as they sit talking and wondering how they are to face Sibyl, a knock sounds at the door. Wilfrid opens it, and there before them stands the girl they fear and pity.

Sibyl tells Wilfrid she is in fear of her secret being discovered, and that she intends to run away and hide in New York's crowded East Side. She begs him to pretend that he is her husband, saying that is her only chance for safety.

Sibyl Burnet and Marie leave at midnight in their automobile.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

NOW that we reflected we agreed that we really knew very little of Ellice Winsloe. He was Jack's friend, rather than ours. The son of a Westerner whose income was derived from his interest in certain copper mines, he had, on his father's death, been left well off. Jack had known him at school, but had lost sight of him for some years, when of a sudden they met again one night while at supper at the Waldorf, and their old friendship had been renewed. Ellice, it appeared, was well known in a certain set in town, and up to the present moment we had both voted him as a good all-round sportsman, a good fellow, and a gentleman. But his secret knowledge, which he refused to betray, and his evident fear lest the dead man be identified, aroused our serious suspicions.

"I wonder," suggested Eric, when we were alone in my room on the night of the inquest, "I wonder whether Ellice was in hiding in those bushes watching us search the body? Do you know, the idea has been in my mind all day?" he added.

"If he was, then we are placed in a very awkward position," I said. "He may make a statement to the police."

"No, I don't think he'll do that. If he did he would betray his own knowledge," was my friend's answer.

The next day passed uneventfully, and, beyond the general surprise at Tibbie's continued absence, there was nothing unusual in the household.

The Maid's Return

Late that night Marie returned, saying that her mistress had driven the car to the hotel at New Rochelle and put it into a garage. Three hours later she left the hotel to go for a walk, but did not return. After she had gone the maid had, it seemed, found a letter in which her mistress ordered her to remain there until Wednesday, and telling her that if she did not return then she was to go back to Bayside and send the chauffeur to New Rochelle for the car.

Marie, used to Tibbie's erratic ways, thought little of it. Her mistress traveled a great deal, had a very large circle of friends and, besides, was entirely unconventional, and knew well how to take care of herself. Therefore the maid had remained until mid-day on Wednesday, and then returned to Bayside.

"I'm getting a little anxious about Tibbie," remarked Mrs. Burnet in the drawing room that evening. "This kind of thing is not at all proper—flying about the country alone."

Jack laughed.

"No good worrying about Tibbie, mother. She'll turn up all right to-morrow, or you'll get a wire from her. You remember that time she met the Danbys in New York and went off yachting with them down to Florida and we didn't know where she was for three weeks. And then she calmly said she'd quite forgotten to tell us where she was going."

"Ah, I remember," said his mother, a kind-faced old lady, whom I liked immensely. "I do wish she would consider my feelings a little more."

With that the subject dropped.

Next morning I took leave of them all, and, promising to meet Eric a few days later, took the train to New York to keep the secret tryst with my little friend who had so suddenly disappeared.

As I stood at the curb looking up and down the wet pavement with its busy, hurrying crowd carrying umbrellas, I knew that I had commenced a very dangerous game. Would she keep her appointment? Did she really intend to go into voluntary exile in some mean street on the great East Side? Was it possible that she, who had been used to every luxury and extravagance, could pose successfully as the wife of a compositor with $20 a week?

The Secret Tryst

Ah! would not her voice, her smart expressions, betray her as a society woman? Thus I stood reflecting and watching, until suddenly a figure in neat black halted before me, and I found myself face to face with the fugitive.

"Tibbie," I cried. "Then you've really come after all?"

"Of course," was her answer, in a low, half-frightened tone. "When I make an appointment I keep it. Where shall we go? We can't talk here, can we?"

A cab was passing, and hailing it we got in hurriedly. I told the man to drive down Lexington avenue to a neighborhood where we would be both quite unknown. Then, as I sank beside her, she asked with a pretty, mischievous smile:

"Well, Wilfrid, and how do you like me as your wife?"

"My wife?" I echoed. "By Jove, yes! I forgot that," and I recollected the strange game I was playing.

"Don't Marie's things fit me well? She's just my figure. I took this dress and hat from her trunk and put them into mine when I left Bayside in the car. I thought they'd come in useful."

I looked at her, and saw that with her brown hair brushed severely from her forehead, her small close-fitting hat and slightly shabby black jacket, she was quite a demure little figure. The exact prototype of the newly married wife of a workingman.

"It's really quite a suitable get-up, I think," I said laughing.

"Yes. I've decided to explain to the curious that I was a lady's maid, and that we've been married nearly a year. Recollect that—in order to tell the same story. Where's the ring? Did you think of that?"

The Wedding Ring

Yes, I had thought of it. I felt in my vest pocket, and taking out the plain little band of gold that I had bought that afternoon, placed it upon her finger, and then bent to examine it more closely in the uncertain light of the street lamps.

"If I told the truth, Wilfrid, you'd be horribly annoyed," she said, looking at me with those wonderful eyes of hers.

"No; what is it?" I asked.

"Well—only—only that I wish you were my real husband!" she answered frankly.

"If you were, then I should fear nothing. But it cannot be—I know that."

"What do you fear, Tibbie?" I asked, very seriously. "Tell me—do tell me."

"I—I can't—I can't now," was her nervous response in a harder voice, turning her gaze away from mine. "If I did, you would withdraw your help—you would not dare to risk your own reputation and mine, as you are now doing, just because we are old boy-and-girl friends."

On we went through the streaming downpour along Lexington avenue, the driver lowering the window, for the rain and mud were beating into our faces.

"Well," I said, "and what do you suggest doing?"

"To-night I must disappear. I shall sleep in some obscure hotel, and to-morrow you must call for me, and we'll go together to fix upon our future 'home.'"

Then she inquired eagerly what impression her absence had produced at home, and I told her.

For a minute she remained serious and thoughtful. Her countenance had changed.

"Then Marie came back, as I ordered her?"

"Yes," I answered, "but won't she miss those things of hers you are now wearing?"

"No; because they were in a trunk that she had placed ready to send to New York. She won't discover they've gone for some weeks, I feel sure."

She described her night run from Bayside to New Rochelle, how she had escaped from Marie, taken train direct up to Boston, remained that night at a hotel, spent a day, arriving in New York that evening at 7 o'clock. In Boston she had been recognized by a friend, the wife of an Alderman, and had some difficulty in explaining why she was there alone.

In Deadly Terror

Our present position was not without its embarrassments. I looked at the pretty woman who was about to pose as my wife, and asked:

"And what name shall we adopt? Have you thought of one?"

"No. Let's see," she said. "How about Morton—Mr. and Mrs. William Morton?"

"All right; then after to-morrow I shall be known as William Morton, compositor."

"And I shall be your very loving and devoted wife," she laughed, her eyes dancing. "In any case, life on the East Side will be an entirely new experience."

"Yes," I said. "I only hope we shan't be discovered. I must be careful—or I shall be compelled to lead a double life. I may be followed one day."

"Yes, but it is for my sake, Wilfrid," she exclaimed, placing her small, trembling hand upon my arm. "Remember that by doing this you are saving my life. Had it not been for you I should have been dead three days ago. My life is entirely in your hands. I am in deadly peril," she added, in a low, desperate whisper. "You have promised to save me—and you will, Wilfrid—I know you will!"

And she gripped my arm tightly and looked into my face.

Notwithstanding her assumed gayety of manner, she was in terror.

Was that dead, white face still haunting her—the face of the stranger who had, in secret, fallen by her hand?

Elaborate Fancies for Table Linens

ON grand occasions abroad beautiful guipure and artistic embroideries in flax or cotton are discarded for the decoration of table linen, preference being given to more showy and fantastic embroideries from China, Turkey and other Eastern countries renowned for their rare needlework.

These specimens, glowing with striking rainbow tints, are combined with pure white linen perforated with open work. Gold thread sparkles, too, on ecru linen intermingled with insertions and squares in antique filet guipure.

A charming fancy is the introduction of garlands of flowers under the deep lace border of a table centre painted in gauze, and in which are placed, according to the design, silver bibelots and rock crystal decanters divided by fruit stands and corbeilles of flowers, the latter agreeing with those encircling the centre and of the lace peeping through the meshes.

The pyramids of fruit rising from the cerapatiers often display midget tufts of flowers stuck through any availing vacancy and form a pleasing substitute to leaves whenever foliage becomes scarce.

One of the most bewitching conceits, not too elaborate, consists of a cluster of ribbons which radiate from a low centrepiece in antique silver, filled with roses, azaleas, pink and blue hortensia, violets, lightened up with gay cowslips or any other blossoms of the season, and within individual means.

A HOMELY FACE is often interesting, but a Pimply, Blotchy, Wrinkly Face is always repulsive.

Just a word about the other kinds—that scratch the enamel and injure the gums and do not clean teeth.

The kinds that are only made to sell, and for nothing else.

There are about two thousand different kinds of tooth powders, pastes and whatnots on the market, but only one

the old, reliable tooth preparation—made, sold and used all over the world for sixty years.

Sozodont is made in three forms: liquid, powder and paste. Sozodont is sold everywhere.

MONDAY'S SHOPPING PHOTO IS IDENTIFIED

The Original of This Photograph Will Receive a Prize of $2.

When Your Picture Appears Be Prompt to Claim the Reward of $2.

THE little snapshot of a woman shopper printed in Monday's BOSTON AMERICAN found an owner within twenty-four hours after it made its appearance.

It was identified yesterday by Miss Agnes O'Brien of No. 19 Spring Park avenue, Jamaica Plain, and she was awarded the daily prize of $2.

Watch these pictures. You don't know the day when your own photo may appear. The Camera Man gets one every day in the vicinity of some store patronized by readers of this newspaper.

When your likeness appears the money is yours when you identify it.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

HOW THE PIANO TRUST

Uses the Good Old Boston Firm Names

To Get Big Prices for Their Common Commercial Pianos

A few years ago we Bostonians could point with pride to the good old Boston names which stood for everything that meant artistic merit and honest values in Pianos—for in Boston we had the good fortune to have the finest piano makers in the world, men who put their very souls into their work, and when these men had their names graven on their instruments it was with the honest pride of genius. All we Bostonians gloried in their pride when we heard these honest names spoken with reverence by the best musical people of our country—and to-day—to-day is the day of money, not music, with the Piano Trust. The only music the Piano Trust cares for is the jingle of the dollars that is heard in the unjust profit they get when they "Play Upon You."

To you who have been reading our piano statements we wish to say this—We do not wish to mislead you in the least, there are still the finest makers of Pianos in the World in our good city, and we hope to have them with us always, but there are several good names now being put on pianos which instead of meaning merit mean mendacity. The names of the men that once meant so much now serve as a decoy to the public to buy a Piano without a soul, without musical merit, without artistic value, without a shred of the genius of the men whose names NOW cloak a common Commercial Piano—a Piano whose parts are bought like so much old junk, bought in a dozen different trade centres of our country, bought wherever they can be bought the cheapest, bought by the ton and shipped into our city, Good Old Boston, as freight, just common commercial freight. The cases from N. Y., the actions (hammers, felting, inside parts) from New York, the keys from Chicago, other parts from Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia and several other places—any old place where they can be bought cheap. These parts are then assembled in Boston, that is, put together, thrown together, glued together, tacked and hammered together, and then, after the soulless thing is framed up they put the good old firm name on it, and last, but not least, they put on a price that is as false to express its value as the name NOW is to express merit.

You ask why this change? The Piano Trust has bought out or frozen out some of our finest firms (not all, thank goodness, we have many fine makers left whose names mean all that is best in piano manufacture, and when the opportunity presents itself we are going to sing their praises in our announcements), and they are now using the old firm names for their good will. In fact, they are gilding the Littleness of the present with the Glory of the Past Greatness. We are seriously considering establishing a bureau of Piano information, at the disposal of the Public, whether they buy of us or not. We would give advice on the matter. Lots can be done to protect the public and the honest makers. Read our weekly announcements and get Piano wise.

3 MONTHS' PIANO LESSONS FREE

to everyone buying a piano of us this week—the finest piano instruction possible. For full information call at Roxbury Storage Salesrooms.

When a dozen, two dozen, 50 or 100 fine Pianos, new or second-hand, get, through force of circumstances, to our storage salesrooms, we put on our sacrifice expense tag, and the piano goes regardless of maker, Trust or no Trust, to the first man or woman with brains enough to know a good thing when they see it. No maker gets a less price than the individual.

Several of below makes left, will be sold this week at reduced prices.

Wellington, Chicago—Sommer, Omaha, Neb.—Whitney, Chicago—Smith & Barnes, Chicago—Rogers Bros., Chicago—Marshall & Wendell, New York—Kranich & Bach, New York—Kingsbury, Chicago—Woodbury, Leominster—Geo. Steck, New York—Jacob Bros., New York. People familiar with these names will know that they are excellent pianos in every respect. They are sold at a less price than New England makes only because Boston is not acquainted with their true worth.

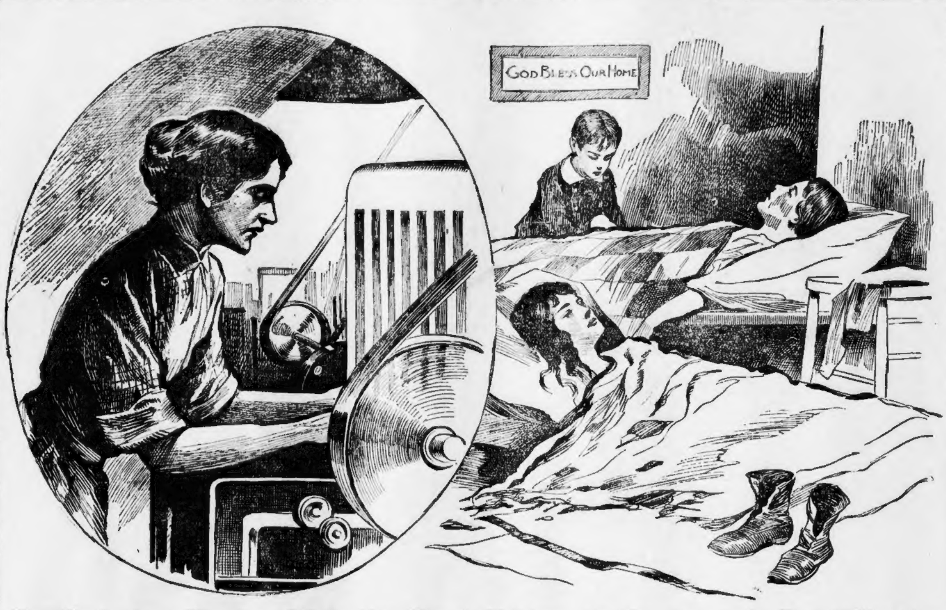
EVENING—THE MOTHER'S HOUR



She Works in a Factory While Her Tired Children Go Hopelessly to Bed Without a Mother to Hear Their Prayers

WHAT is more beautiful than the scene in the children's bed chamber at night when the mother listens to the prattle of the little ones, cheers them with the hundred tokens of love which only a mother can show, teaches them their prayers, and then gently kisses them and tucks them in under the clothes, wishing them a good night and happy dreams?

Life is hard enough at its best, and it is perhaps too much to expect that every person should be able in his maturer years to look back upon a happy childhood.

But there is one thing at least to which every child born into this world has a right, and that is the loving presence of its mother when the day's troubles are over and it is about to pass into the silent land of slumber.

Who can see without emotion the little white-robed figures at the bed side and hear the halting lips say:

Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep,
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take!

Imagine that scene WITHOUT the mother.

Imagine the household in which, when night comes, the mother is away at the factory where she has been toiling all day, bending over her hard, uninteresting task, making, perhaps, a garment for the children of some other more fortunate woman, while her own babes are at home crying for her care and caresses.

In the scene pictured above the artist has shown the mother at her work AWAY FROM HOME, while the children have thrown themselves down upon the bed and gone to sleep without a mother to hear their prayers.

Such scenes, unhappily, are too common.

The workingmen of the State have for years been demanding the enactment of a law which would prevent employers requiring women and children to work nights in the factories. Such a bill came up in the Legislature this year. IT WAS PASSED BY A MAJORITY IN BOTH HOUSES.

And then—to quote the language of President Baer—"the Christian gentlemen to whom God, in his infinite wisdom, had entrusted the property interests of the country," got together, hired professional lobbyists, induced certain senators to stay away, and so reduced the majority for the bill that the president of the Senate was enabled to jam through a vote reversing the previous action of the Senate and defeating the bill.

So close was the vote, even in spite of the treacherous absence of several senators, that the president of the Senate himself had to cast the deciding ballot which finally killed the bill.

And the eminent Christian gentlemen breathed easier. They had at least another year in which they could force boys and girls to work at night, and could require mothers to be toiling in factories when they should be at home putting their children to bed.

That bill to prevent women from working nights in factories had been passed by both branches of the Legislature once before, and had been vetoed by a Governor who thought the campaign contributions of the textile manufacturers were of more value than the votes of the workingmen. HE WAS DEFEATED FOR RE-ELECTION. EVEN THE MONEY OF THE TEXTILE TRUST COULD NOT SAVE HIM.

When the bill had been passed again by another Legislature and was about to go before another Governor, who wanted the support of the Textile Trust, the argument was used:

"GOV. GUILD WANTS THIS BILL KILLED. REMEMBER WHAT IT DID TO BATES. YOU MUST SAVE GUILD FROM HAVING TO PASS ON IT."

Well, they saved Guild from having to pass on it.

The president of the Senate, who in person delivered the blow which killed that bill, was appointed to the Superior Court bench as soon as the Legislature adjourned.

He is ill qualified to sit on the bench. He rarely, if ever, tried a case in court. His highest qualification for the place of judge is his consistent record of having voted in the Legislature as the moneyed "interests" wanted him to vote—every time.

AND GUILD MADE THE MAN WHO SAVED HIM A JUDGE!

You mothers who put your own children to bed at night, and teach them their prayers, do you want them to grow up to pay honor to such a man as that?

And you, FATHERS, will you vote to return to the State House such a GOVERNOR as that?

WE THINK NOT!

Let the watchword of every man from now till election be:

"NO MORE OF SUCH MORAL COWARDICE AND HYPOCRISY. Let us have a Governor who will be GOVERNOR, and not the tool of the money-serving corporations!"

Rhode Island's Fight for Independence

Trying to Shake off the Shackles of Oil Trust Aldrich and His Corrupt Boss, Brayton

In Rhode Island, as in Massachusetts and New York, there is a fight between the people and the corporations. "Boss" Brayton, perhaps more than any other man in the United States, represents the system of government wherein the corporations hire a boss to manipulate Legislatures and ballot boxes for them.

Brayton, the notorious tool of Senator Aldrich and Marsden J. Perry, is trying to elect Samuel P. Colt—himself a trust magnate—a Senator of the United States.

Colt is the official head of the Rubber Trust. Aldrich is the father-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and is known throughout the world as the special agent of the Standard Oil Company and its allied interests in the United States Senate.

Marsden J. Perry is the president of the Rhode Island Company, the street railway monopoly of Rhode Island which, not so long ago, told the Supreme Court of the State that it would not obey its mandate.

This disreputable crew of public plunderers, who have brought upon Rhode Island a reputation for political corruption not equalled by that of any other State in the Union, turns to Brayton to manage the campaign which has for its object the election of Trust Magnate Colt as United States Senator and George H. Utter as Governor.

Some of the spellbinders in the employ of Brayton have paid the BOSTON AMERICAN the compliment of attacking it in their hired speeches. They do not like the special edition of this newspaper which has been circulated in Rhode Island for the last few days, because it has brought the issue of Braytonism plainly before the people.

Brayton's domination has been known to every well informed person in Rhode Island, but no newspaper published in the State has dared to offend the powerful interests represented in Aldrich, Perry and Colt by printing the facts.

When the Legislature of Rhode Island is in session, Charles R. Brayton takes his place in the office of High Sheriff Hunter C. White, and there openly he SELLS LEGISLATION in the interest of any man or any corporation that has the price to pay for it.

One of his "clients" is the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

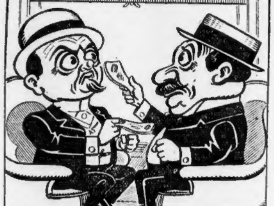
For the public attacks of the men employed by this corrupting agent of predatory wealth, the BOSTON AMERICAN is duly grateful. IT ASKS NO BETTER PRAISE.

We hope that the intelligent citizens of Rhode Island will realize the reputation their State would have througnout the Union if they should send to represent it in the Senate at Washington another agent of the law-breaking trusts who would take his place beside Nelson W. Aldrich.

In these times of trust high prices and trust defiance of law the mere suggestion that two trust magnates should represent one State in the national Senate is enough to send chills down the spine of a patriotic American citizen.

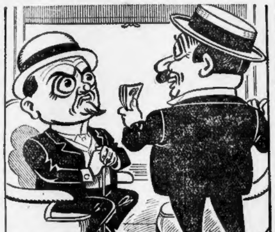
MR. E. Z. MARK MAKES A BET

Copyright, 1906, by American-[illegible]



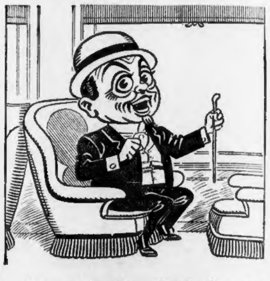
1.—CHANCE FELLOW TRAVELLER (after heated argument)—Well, sir, I repeat, sir, that morphia IS made from coal-tar. I'll bet you five hundred dollars that it is.

MR. E. Z.—A man as stubborn and ignorant as you deserves to lose his money. There's five hundred to cover your bet.

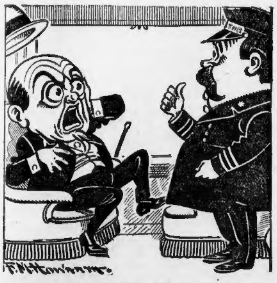


2.—CHANCE FELLOW TRAVELLER—Now, when we reach our destination a chemist shall decide the bet. But in the meantime, who will hold the stakes? Ah! the conductor; he's in the next car. I'll take the money to him.

MR. E. Z—Perfectly satisfactory to me, sir.



MR. E. Z. (after fifteen minutes' wait)—I wonder what keps that loud-mouthed ignoramus so long? Explaining the bet to the conductor, I suppose. Say, this is just like finding money.



4.—CONDUCTOR—Bet? ME stakeholder? My dear sir, you must be dreaming. Did I see a short man with a big black moustache? Yes he got off at that stop we made ten miles back.

SUN SHADOWS

THERE never was success so nobly gained,
  Or victory so free from selfish dross,
But in the winning some one had been pained,
  Or some one suffered loss.

There never was so nobly planned a fete
  Or festival throng with heart on pleasure bent
But some neglected one outside the gate
  Wept tears of discontent.

There never was a bridal morning fair,
  With hope's blue skies and love's unclouded sun
For two fond hearts, that did not bring despair
  To some sad other one.

Study Children and Learn Happiness

By Rev. Albert E. George

DID you ever watch the people hurrying out of the South Terminal on any week-day?

What a study of faces!

Some are earnest, some sad and over-burdened, some doubtless struggling to accomplish certain results during the day. Very few apparently are happy. In the midst of the surging crowd, you run across a child toddling along. There you see real happiness.

What is the child thinking of?

It could not tell you, even were it asked.

But it is happy.

Don't you wish as you look into that smiling face that you could once more be happy like a child.

That you could forget your trials, your cares and responsibilities! What a different world this would become if we could forget some things and not worry.

You remember the old song of a generation or more ago, "I Wish I Were a Boy Again." It touched many a heart. The sentiment is all right.

Our most helpful lessons, after all, are gained from watching how a child enjoys life. It is so simple!

That's just what every adult should do—seek happiness as a child.

Watch the little one looking into the store windows. It enjoys seeing.

How long it will play and get enjoyment out of the simplest thing! We children of larger growth are to make our happiness out of simple things.

We are not to settle down into the troubles of life and lodge there.

Be a child again. Get the child mind—the mind that can live apart from its surroundings, and when it sees something to be happy over, can be happy in spite of its troubles
